Don Felipe, banker of Manila, knew that to lie for the good of the church Don Felipe's commercial English was so limited for use on an occasion like of counting the requisite number of beads on Sunday or to confess to Father Jose at least once a quarter. So Don Felipe lied with readiness when the church or his pesetas were concerned, especially the pesetas.

But Larson had often worsted him at poker, and out of respect for the man he finally gave him permission to try for the reward. whether he would some time reach his death by Mauser bullets or by order of a court martial.

So Don Felipe sent his emissaries jungleward, to return after three months with a medley of bruises and beards of long standing and wide sweep. They brought the boy, and he was bruised about the ears.

"He thought he was the king of these cannibal isles," Turner said.

"We had to cuff the little devil a good deal to teach him his place. At first he ordered us around as if he was born in shoulder straps, but we soon taught in shoulder straps, but we soon taught cannot be demied. I take refuge in the

The colonel in turn was indignant and showed him the door, wherent Don Felipe waxed more wrathy than ever. He swore in fervid Castillan, brandishing his flably fists, and told Turner and Larson to get their pay where they might.

It was a bluff, a lie, to save the reother message arrived. It read: It was a bluff, a lie, to save the remignt.

It was a bluff, a lie, to save the reward, for if more cuffing would have kept the boy's ears roaring like a canebrake in a monsoon. But what was to be done? The military government must be lenient with the resident population, advertising its benevolent intentions. Moreover, how were soldiers, who, according to the sergeant's book, had been spending their time in barracks, to receive pay for a nasty job somewhere in the jungle?

Larson was stupefied. The ingratitude of the man was beyond him. It was an hour before he recovered from the shock, and when the eruption finally began Turner stopped him.

"Return good for evil," he admonished.

Larson was dazed anew, and his dumbness returned upon him.

"When do we sign the papers?"

"Saturday evening, and we are with in style—invite a dozen or two of the push and have a blowout at the castle of his highness. A banquet is always in order with these Spaniards. A Spaniard couldn't have his mustache curled without giving a dinner."

Numerous paper lanterns rivaled the splendor of twenty white uniforms in the pavilion that served for a banquet hall, and the glory thereof was full compensation to Don Felipe for an expenditure that ordinarily would have been heartrending. Monday morning, and Don Felipe sat at his desk, a look, half anger, half terror on his face and his right hand grasping nervously for his cane. The intruder was Turner. Don Felipe's apprehensions were soon quieted, however. Turner stopped at three paces from the door, hat in hand, and made a deep obeisance.

"Will the senor grant me a word?" Don Felipe radiated majesty for a half minute, then pronounced:

"I shall hear you."

Turner expressed gratitude.

"The senor no doubt expects to dispose of his plantation."

No reply.

The Mobuen Journal

FRIDAY, JULY 4, 1902

The Great and General Court of Massachusetts adjourned, or, rather, was prorogued, at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, June 28, 1902.

The session had been somewhat longerthan common, almost six months, which was three months more than there was any necessity for. Other States, having as much business as this, and the most of them holding biennial sessions, get through in three months. It has been a working Legislature, and many important measures have been considered and enacted. The members have shown a disposition to earn their salaries, and nobody thinks they have not done so. Both branches were composed of men of more than ordinary legislative ability. In was a mand an 8, hour day, and payment of mand an 8, hour day, and payment of Roberts to the House this fall. During the three years last past he has filled the position of Representative with ability and credit, and when a man of that stamp is found it is not the part of wisdom to cast him off for an untried and probably less efficient one. Mr. Roberts commanded the confidence and esteem of the Speaker, and his fellow members. He enjoyed a first lass rating. This was shown by his appointment on important committees, and the success of the measures he originated, and others supported by him. — The National Band gave a fine Party, not so much for the mild rebuke it administers to Hon. Samuel W. McCall, M. C. from the 8th Massachusetts District, for flocking with the Democrats on the Philippine question, as for the information it furnishes respecting the relations existing, or to exist, between the United States and those Islands. Yet, the article is a disspointment. Mr. McCall is not a Republican and has no just claim on the Republicans of the 8th District for their votes, although, we understand, he will make an appeal to them for reelection this fall. This, we think, the Journal should have said; it should have told the Party, in plain English, that they could not afford, and it would be unjust to the Administration, to continue longer to send a Mugroump to misrepresent them in Congress.

A Cure In the Fallur.

"Did you ever notice that, as a rule, the persons who seek death and are rescued from the grave never court the society of the dark angel again?"

The propounder of the question was a hospital physician, and he proceeded to explain: A Cure In the Failure.

"What I mean is that of all the per "What I mean is that of all the persons who attempt suicide and are foiled but few try self murder a second time. Probably one-half, if not more, of all those who try to kill themselves are frustrated. The percentage of those who leap into the dark river a second time is exceedingly small. I have tried to discover the reason for this from the lips of those who have gone through the terrible experience, but I have not met with success.

"It is queer that persons, after devoting weeks and months to a consideraing weeks and months to a considera-tion of so momentous a question and deciding to end their existence, should, when folled, declare that they were when foiled, declare that they were fools and swear never to do the like again. Yet this is what is done in a sarge majority of instances. Those who have stared at death seem to live life anew. The past is effaced; a new light seems to have dawned. The sunshine is dearer, the air is purer. It is the convalescent taking great drafts of the outdoor air with a keenness of relish that was unknown before."

dared to look from under their long black lashes at a face that was the face of a people's hero; not all the people, for here in her father's house Anne had heard fierce denunciations and even curses against that name. But when had politics aught to do with a maid's romancing? Deep down in her heart the girl cherished the memory of one summer evening, when all alone the grrat man reined in his horse and sprang from the saddle to walk and talk with a pretty child. Two years had come and gone, but over the low gate Anne leaned and dreamed of her here as did that Lisa in faroff Italy of her king.

The complex stadent was the land to be white she whose heart lay buried in a woman's sanctified in the white shrine of the maiden soul; read also, with a soldier's about the pretty mouth. The evening shadows grew longer and the sun vanished behind the hills as the tinkle of belis chimed up from the pasture. With eyes still dream thralled Anne wandered out and across the road to where the spring bubbled up from its mossy pool. A little rustic summer house sheltered it, and the little stream lost itself in a dense thicket of hazel bushes that grew close up to servers of the "dreary" desert, the 'hopeless," the "cheerless" desert, but the desert house the spring bubbled up from its mossy pool. A little rustic summer house sheltered it, and the little stream lost itself in a dense thicket of hazel bushes that grew close up to the arlor. The girl's light foot made no sound as she entered and dropped down upon the seat. Voices close at hand aroused her as a low murmur came from the hazel copse.

"The best place is where the road comes through Hungerford's woods, this side of the mill."

Then another voice: "I don't like it. He knew the little fingers that silpped the bit between his velvet lips, and he laid his handsome head against her curls in mute caress as the saddle was girted. Harry Clay had never carried that weight before, and when the flapping riding skirt struck his withers the fine ears lay close as he reared and pawed the air, with the thin nostrils flared, but a whisper, a touch upon the mane, and he dropped into a light canter along the footpath, his feet making no sound upon the turf.

Huntington, a visitor from New York, vainly endeavoring to secure a pledge from her that she would be his wife. But Miss Huntington did not consider one just emerging from cadetship a suitable partner for her, especially as she wished an establishment and Whiting had nothing but a lieutenant's pay. Whiting met Miss Huntington at the ranch for the first time since their separation at West Point. She seemed ready to resume their intimacy, at least temporarily, but Whiting was reserved. One evening they were standing to gether on the broad veranda of the house viewing a scene lighted by the full moon.

"What a glorious night for a ride;" said the girl. "I have a mind to order my horse and have a canter."

"You would be in danger of scalping."

I know you are brave. Come."

"My brother officers would not share your opinion if I should ride back beside you. If you wish to save me save yourself first. Once in the ranch you may send me assistance."

"Will nothing move you?"

"Nothing."

Realizing that there was but one chance to undo what she had done. Kate gave her horse a cut with her whip and dashed away. Whiting dismounted and entered a thicket. He had brought all the arms he could carry, a Winchester and two revolvers. A CANDIDATE.

James Wilson Grimes, Esq., of Reading is a candidate for the Repub-lican nomination for Senator in the Sixth Middlesex District with more than an even chance of making con-nections. He is strong with the voters. His magnanimous withdrawal two years ago in favor of the present Senator clearly entitles him to the nomination, let alone the claims of the east end of the District to it JOURNAL, sets forth reasons which off last Tuesday morning. seem conclusive to us why Mr. Grimes should receive the nomination this year.

Peculiar Habits of These Threadilke Little Serpents.

The "horsehair snakes" are small, flesh colored mites which live prindignally in stagnant water. After going through various transformations they come to the surface of the water in the shape of very slender, purplish looking threads. When they reach this last stage, they leave the water and work their way up the stalks and leaves of aquatic plants. When opportunity affords, they attach themselves to the feet, legs, wings and other parts of larger insects, often, as one authority states, creeping under the wing case of beeties. In the case of the cricket, katydid, grasshopper and other insects of that lik, whose legs are hollow, the tiny horsehalt takes the advantage and creeps up the hollows into the very witels.

Preclous Picture Frames.
Perhaps the most valuable frame ever made for a picture is that which incloses "The Virgin and Child" in the cathedral of Milan. Its size is 8 by detailed to Milan. Its size is 8 by detailed to feet and is of massive hammered gold, with an inner molding of lapis to have been the gift of a rich numery, and its estimated value is £25,000. One of the pictures in the Vatican at Rome is inclosed in a frame studded with jewels, so that the value of the frame nearly equals that of the pictures with similar frames of great value.

Instinct of the Mudfish.

The remarkable instinct which causes the mudfish to roll bimself in a ball of stands of that lik, whose legs are hollow, the tiny horsehalr takes the advantage and creeps up the hollows into the very vitals.

This accounts for the fat and clumsy condition of some individuals of the above named species, single specimens of the cricket having been caught with over two dozen of these threadlike "snakes" attached to and inside of the bodies. After heavy rains, which are weighted down by these parasites, the "horsehalr snake" and the context of the world with the wind the care weighted down by these parasites, the "horsehalr snake" and the context of the world with mentioned in the opening. About this time the parent "snake" dies to make room for its progeny.

FASCINATING DANGER.

FLOWER FRAGRANCE.

A Mysterious sympathy Between the Essence and the Bloom.
One of the leading manufacturers of perfumery declares that he is quite certain that flowers possess souls. The fragrance of a flower is soul, and it exists when the flower it self has perished. This is not a poetical flower, he maintains, but is fact, the fragrance of a flower is the flower in the flower is soul, and it exists when the flower it self has perished. This is not a poetical fancy, he maintains, but is fact, that when certain conditions are fulled a part of the life of a flower is a fact that when certain conditions are fulled a part of the life of a flower stand that when certain conditions are fulled a part of the life of a flower stand that when certain conditions are fulled a part of the life of a flower seems to die.

Although the fragrance of flowers dead years ago may have undergone all sorts of manufacturing processes to extract it and to fix it, yet it never dies. When the flowers of the kind it was extracted from bloom, it exhibits a marvelous sympathy.

Take, as an example, the case of jonguls. At the end of the year the smell of the perfume is constant, but in spring a change appears. In May when the flowers are in bloom, the coloriess liquid has its seent exait ed to a surprisingly ligh degree.

Bells.

It was long a fixed idea that silver mixed with the bell metal improved the tone, but this is now considered incorrect. The Acton Nightingale and Silver Bell, two singularly sweet bells at St. John's college, Cambridge, are said to have a mixture of silver, but if true this is not believed by competent authorities to be the cause of their beautiful tone. This idea led to the story of the monk Tandio concealing the silver given him by Charlemagne and casting the bell in the monastery of St. Paul of inferior metal, where upon he was struck by the clapper and of St. Paul of inferior metal, whereupon he was struck by the clapper and killed. In the ninth century bells were made in France of iron. They have been cast in steel, and the tone has been found nearly equal in fineness to that of the bell metal, but, having less vibration, was deficient in length, and thick glass bells have been made which give a beautiful sound, but are too brittile to long withstand the strokes of the clapper.—Gentleman's Magazine.

The Hudson had never looked more beautiful than on that sunny aftermoon. The young fellow felt as strong and vigorous as some of those sturdy little tugs which were steaming up and down to the docks, carrying in their wake ten or twenty barges, each laden with the necessary materials for the upbuilding of a mighty city.

Bobs had behaved remarkably well, but he was getting a little noisy, and they decided to give the auto a rest and allow the patient to have some mild exercise. He was the healthiest looking sick dog ever seen. Jack trembled for some unsuspecting sparrows that were holding a noisy convention at a bend in the road, but Bobs' excited barking apprised them of their danger, and they and Bobs disappeared in a cloud of dust.

Jack and Miss Templeton were alone. The temptation was more than he could stand. His hand slipped over A Castom That Dates Back to the Reign of Charlemagne.

Bells were solemnly baptized like children, a custom which is still extant in the Roman church. This is probably not a primitive practice and cannot be traced further back than the reign of Charlemagne. It is first distinctly mentioned in the time of Pope XIII. (2889, when he gave his own name to the great bell of the Lateran church. Sleidan gives an account of the ceremonial to be observed.

"First of all, the bells must be so hung that the bishop may be able to walk around them. When he has chanted a few psaims in a low voice, he mingles water and sait and consecrates them, diligently sprinkling the bell with the mixture, both inside and out. Then he wipes it clean and with holy oll describes on it the figure of the cross, praying the while that when the bell is swung up and sounded faith and charter may abound among menn

An English King's Death.

Remember the Baker.

At the court of assizes in Venice, when sentence of death is about to be passed, a man clothed in a long black robe enters the court, and advancing to the bench bows profoundly to the bugs, saying, "Remember the baker!"

Then he bows profoundly to the bugs, saying, "Remember the baker!"

Then he bows again and retires. Here is the explanation of the custom:

Three centuries ago a baker was executed at Venice for a crime of which he was not guilty. When his inno condemned him invested a sum of money, the interest on which serves to keep a lamp perpetually lighted in the palace of the doges, this being called the "lamp of expiation." In addition, their fatal mistake has for 300 years been held up as a warning to their successors on the bench when they are about to inflict the extreme penalty of the law.

JAMES MCDONALD, suddenly as far away from her as they would have been a year before. She remembered having read a newspaper remembered having read a newspaper clipping which had suggested higher than this for her. "Miss Kennedy's abilities," it had said, "are rather above her voice, and it would not be amiss for her to see what she could do in legitimate comedy." Indeed she had been thinking seriously of leaving the operatic stage at the close of the present engagement, perhaps for the drama, perhaps for no stage at all. Who could tell? She lifted the flowers and impulsively hurried off to the man ager's room.

"Why, surely my watch isn't wrong!" she exclaimed, for she was not needed until half past 2. No; only the manager often wanted to speak to her. The manager wanted to speak to her. The manager often wanted to speak to her. She came cheerfully forward to see what he wanted. He was standing in his shirt sleeves giving the gas man a dressing about some lights which had a tuined the star's costume the night before, but he left his speech in the middle and came to meet her, laying his hand familiarly on her shoulder. He was a big man and rather ugly, but even the chorus girls confessed that he had a way with him. The little singer felt it, too, for she let herself be drawn into the office, and the door shut behind her. Then she gave a fillip to her short skirts and perched The Ligence of Fice in the star's estimate the night beginned to the footlights to the star's estimate the night beginned to the star's estimate the night beginned to the foreign about some lights which had restricted as a fail milliar to every street by now, as the star's restrained in the star's estimate the night before, but he left his speech in the star's contention the star's contention the star's contention the star's contention that he had a way with him. Some Historical Windows.

In history and literature the window holds a conspicuous place. There is the window in Leven Castle tower through which the wistful eyes of Mary, queen of Scots, strained their gaze across the lonely lake; there is the window in Greenwich palace from which Elizaboth waved her farewells to her brave seamen as they set forth in their tiny "cockboats" to seek a westward path to far Cathay.

There is the window in the tower through which the aged Laud stretched his hands in benediction as Strafford passed onward to his death; there is the window "in Carlsbrook's narrow case," which baffled the unfortunate

A Really Poor Author.
When Dr. Johnson was a resident of Grub street, he made the acquaintance of a poet named Samuel Boyse, whose of a poet named Samuel Boyse, whose poem on the Deity and other works had earned him high praise. Boyse could not go abroad to seek work because his clothes were in pawn, so he lay abed with his arms thrust through two holes in the insective blanket, which was the only covering, writing and starving. Johnson raised enough money to get his clothes for him, but two days later Boyse was in bed again, eating a stew of beef and mushrooms purchased by the repawning of his suit. "I might as well eat while I may," he said, "for I must some day starve, whether I will or not."

Ancient Gold.

In olden times gold was obtained abundantly from the rivers of Asia.

The sands of Pactolus, the golden The sands or Factorus, the gouen fleece secured by the Argonauts, the yellow metal of Ophir, the fable of King Midas, all illustrate the eastern origin of gold. Alexander the Great brought nearly $500,000,000 of gold from Persia. Gold also came from Arabia and from the middle of Africa by way of the Nile. But all of these by way of the Nile. But all of these famous sources of supply were long ous sources of supply were long Englishmen are familiar with the name "bawbee," applied to the Scotch halfpenny, but to few does it bring the association of a baby queen and a loyal people. Those who meet with the word in their reading do not often stop to ask how it came to be applied. It appears that the first attempt at the portraiture of the unfortunate Mary, queen of Scots, was made in her infancy, and her small face was engraved upon the Scottish halfpennies at the time of her coronation in 15-43, when she was but nine months old. A number of these small coins are still preserved, and it will be easily understood how the name "bawbee," or baby, came to be given to the coin bearing the effigy of the baby. The halfpenny of Scotland is still commonly called the bawbee, although the baby face no longer appears on it.— The Scotch Halrpenny paby face no longer appears on it.-

"Do you know how Sothern senior came in for his first success?"

"Yes; I've heard that story. They say that when he went on the stage as Lord Dundreary he tripped and caught his step. The audience laughed, and he kept it up."

"And did you ever know how Milton Ruggles got to be the great funny man he was?"

"Not I herer head that."

"No; I never heard that."
"It was this way: Ruggles when he first started out took a fancy that he could play light comedy, especially the laughable parts. He had a very droil way with him that took with his friends, and when they learned that he was going on the stage to do that business they all agreed he would make a success of it. So great was the pronise that he secured an engagement in a roaring farce and set about studying it. The truth is that a good deal hung on his success. The star came on in the middle of the first act. He was dressed in a thread-bare suit of black and had on a rueful countenance. Somehow the effect, in-stead of being lugubrious, was ludi-crous. I cast my eye on the audience and saw an incipient smile. It was suppressed, however, till Ruggles be-"In a house where there three servants one gets much better three servants one gets much better treatment than in one where there are a dozen. Do you know what you eat in a great big millionaire establishment? Why, corned beef and cabbage, chuck roast, beans and potatoes, foods that are good 'fillers,' and for dessert you get boiled rice and for a treat Waldorf-Astoria pudding. Don't you know what Waldorf-Astoria pudding. Don't you know what Waldorf-Astoria pudding. In a smaller house, where the servants don't number more than two or three, you get lee cream, chicken, rib roasts, fresh vegetables and strawberries. You eat, you see, exactly the same fare that your master does. But in the big place, where the servants number a dozen and where very expensive foods are served every day, it is impossible to let you fare as the head of the bouse does. It would cost too much money."—Kansas City Journal.

Wyer, a Veteran of the Civil War, was one of the visitors, being accompanied to Lakeville by Col. A. L. Richardson. Considerable talk having been made, pro and con, respecting the campgrounds there, Capt. Wyer paid his respects to them with a view of settling the question in his own mind as to their fitness for military purposes. He was pleased with them. Except in a few particulars, the musterfield appeared to pretty near ideal. It is ample in size, close to a chain of lakes, not far from the salt water, and well supplied with those things which make soldier's life in camp agreeable. He said the appearance and conduct of the soldiers were supurb. The Brigade will pull stakes tomorrow and return home.

So far as we know, the Republicans have settled on no man for Representative candidate, although the names of several have been mentioned by individual members of the Party. What their decision will be is uncertain. The Democrats, it is fair to presume, will renominate Mr. Henry M. The two are the only sur vivors of the Legislature of 1842, when Mr. Richardson was but 21 years old, and in a speech in that body he indulged in some boyish oratorical pyrotechnics which Mr. Boutwell remembered and commented on severely in his book. But he has taken it all back, and now remembers that the Woburn Representative was a fine young fellow, as smart as a whip. Boutwell intimates in his letter that he loves Richardson, and will do him justice in the next edition of his "Memories."

There Is No Mikado.

Mr. W. S. Gilbert was no doubt primarily responsible for the belief which is everywhere prevalent that the emperor of Japan is always called the mikado by his people. Ask nine men out of ten what is the official title of the ruler of the Islands of the chrysan-themum and they will probably think they are being made fun of. Assure them that the question is asked in all sober seriousness and they will give that of the title of Mr. Gilbert's imperial opera. For all this, the nine men out of ten would be wrong. His majesty is known as "tenno hel-ka," which means "his insperial majesty." which means "his imperial majesty." Thus the people of Japan address their

The Combination Word That Opened Commodore Vanderbilt's Safe.

There is many a failure on the part of "grown ups" to comprehend the mental processes of their imaginative superiors—the children. Some clumsy person calls the most charming device of fancy "another of those naughty fibs." By that condemnation he sets v. v. a well nigh impassable barrier between himself and the childish dreamer. Not long ago a grown up was accosted on the street by a dainty maiden of four, who nodded a bright good morning and then said, "Isn't there going to be a wedding down there?" pointing across the square.

"I think not," said the obtuse adult. "I haven't heard of any wedding."

"Are you sure? I think there's going to be one," persisted the little maiden.

"I don't see any flowers or carriages and I guess you are mistaken," replied the champion of dull fact.

Then the tiny pleader drew nearer, and with an entreating touch of her hand and a voice lowered out of hearing, if the fairles she breathed:

"Please say there's going to be a wedding. I'm just making believe."

Could the power of imagination go further? Could there be a simpler device for turning this dull world into a garden of flowers and sweet music than this same gentle "making believe."

The Most Custons European Was That Ever Was Waged.

The most curious European war ever waged was fint which in the sixteenth century, the period of the reformation and the rennissance, was carried or single handed for between five and six single handed for between five and six years between a bankrupt grocer of Berlin and the elector of Saxony, who was the most powerful German prince of the period. The grocer's name was Hans Kohlhase, and the immediate cause of the quarrel was the arresting of two of his horses in the elector's territory, he being a subject of the elector of Brandenburg. Failing to get redress, he adopted what was then a perfectly legal expedient and declared formal war on the realm of Saxony. The declaration was accepted in due form, and the war began,

Telling the Weather From Mists.

The motion of mists, rapid or slow, was regarded as one of the best methods of foretelling the approach of rain or snow. When there was a mist before the rise of the full moon, if clouds were seen in the west before the sun rose or there was a mist in the fields before sunrise, wet weather was expected. When the mists vanished rapidly and the moon seemed to rise faster than usual, fine weather was sure to gladden the hearts of the merrymakers on the succeeding day. The Ten Commandments, or ten words, as they are sometimes called, are summed up by our Lord in Mark xil, 29-31, in these words: "Hear, O Israel; the Lord our God is one Lord, and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with soul, and with all thy mind, and all thy strength. This is the commandment, and the second is an thy strength. This is the instcommandment, and the second is like—namely this. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these." He thus quoted from Deut, vi, 4, 5, and Lev, xix, 18, for He honored the whole of the law, the prophets and the psalms (Luke xxiv, 27, 44), never in any way discounting the least portion. How very unlike Him in this respect are some wise people of our day who profess to be His followers! See in connection with this fifth commandment Prov. I, 8, and note that in Eph. vi, 2, it is called the first commandment with promise. The promise had doubtless a special reference to Israel, against thy neighbor.

There are tongues that devise mischiefs, that love evil more than good and lying rather than righteousness, but such do not belong in the holy city (Ps. II, 2, 3; Rev. xxii, 15). "He had learned that a few years ago some that whether deeds that mortest had not dwell within My house; he that telleth lies shall not tarry in My sight" (Ps. cl. 7). Many who would scorn to take what does not belong to them, as between man and man, might have to plead guilty when searched by the question, "Will a man rob God?" Yet God had to say to Israel, "Ye have robbed Me in tithes and offerings" (Mal. iii, 8). Inasmuch as our relation to God is the first question and the matter of the utmost impertaince, let the believer ask himself, Am I robbing God of any portion of my being or my time or my money? He claims our body as His property (Rom. xii, 1, 2; I Cor. vi, 19, 20), and at least a seventh of our time and a tenth of our income.

Dalton entered Mrs. Murray's purchases in the daybook and then went back to his desk and the letter.

He drew it from the pigeonhole of imitation walnut and turned it slowly from side to side as if he were trying to match the pale gray tint from his scant ribbon stock. He looked curious ly at the deeper gray sealing wax. He was always very careful not to break the seal when he opened her letters. He liked to study the stately "H" which hid what she said to him from the bustling, impertinent world.

Not that he had received many such missives. There were just four in all, and he knew them by heart. He read this last one slowly and for the third ture, and she gathered it up daintily as they walked in the moonlight. He felt as if some explanation of his presence were due, and finally he plunged into

"You see, Miss Hardin, I thought perhaps you'd change your mind about the school if I just could talk to you. Perhaps you'd like to come out next summer anyhow. I've always pictured you so sort of different, but now of course I understand. You wouldn't like it out there no matter how much we might want you."

He was looking down at the chiffon ruffle on her gown, which billowed like white foam around her feet. An odd smile trembled on her lips; something very like a tear shone in her eye. She "You see, Miss Hardin, I thought grove. Dalton stopped short and gazed into her face.

"If it's open! Why, Miss Hardin, of course it will always be open for you!" Then he added in a lower voice, "But next summer is a long way off!"

Elizabeth sighed softly, and a faraway look came into her eyes as if she were scenting the keen mountain air and the Colorado pines.

"Yes, a long, long way!"

Then Dalton forgot her picture in the rapper—forgot the imposing frock. He remembered only the little gray note signed "Faithfully yours. Elizabeth Hardin"—and the sigh.

What happened next is not herein set forth, but western men are notorious for acting promptly.

This requirements and marked the signed "Faithfully gours."

He had known Nellie Tompkins since childhood. The two farms houses stood close together, and the children had been Zeb and Nell to each other until he had become his father's "hired man" and she had put on long dresses. Zeb had never escorted any other girl to the circus, to a picnic, to camp meeting, to a harvest dance or a corn shucking, and Nell had never encouraged any other young man.

The old folks had looked upon it as a matter of course that the young couple would get married in due time. It was only after the girl had been sent away to school and her letters to Zeb had been few and far between that he awoke to the fear of losing her.

Nell Tompkins at eighteen was a good looking, attractive girl, and Zeb realized that education and society would improve her still more. Other young men would be attracted, and he would stand no show.

As Zeb reached the camp and emptied his buckets of sap into the barriels he lingered and thought of more recent sorrows. Neil Tompkins had returned from school two weeks before on a vacation. He had hastened over to the farmhouse in his working clothes to welcome her, and plainly she had been shocked. There was no warmth in her handshake, no love in her eyes. Even when he reappeared a night or two later in his Sunday best she had called him Mr. Taylor and had refused to remember how he had carried her on his back over mudholes and boosted her over fences. A change had come to blast all his hopes, and on his road home he made up his mind to face it like a man.

PERSIAN RUGS.

A Safe Rule by Which to Distinguish the Genuine Ones.
A great many persons flatter themselves that they are able to tell a gentulen Perslan rug from a spurious machine made one by touch, but in this they deceive themselves. The best and surest way to tell a genuine from an imitation Persian rug is the following:

If one will look closely, one will observe that is the genuine Persian rug the intricate and complicated pattern or design is not altogether symmetrical, the corresponding flowers, vines or geometrical figures of one side being a little out of line, larger or smaller or not meeting and pointing with figures on the corresponding detail on the opposite side of the rug. This is owing to the fact that in hand weaving it is impossible to obtain perfect symmetry of patterns, especially when the designs are as complicated as they are tively rigid and harsh. This a pretty safe guide, and if observed one wil n mistake an imitation for a gen uine Persian rug.

Cultivating Ginger.

Ginger is made a matter of selentific culture in Jamaica. It is propagated by cutting up small pieces of the root, and if possible, rich, cool soil from recently cleared woods is selected for it. It is a great impoverisher of the soil and grows so luxuriantly that in a short time a little piece of root will spread so as to produce nearly a pound of new roots. The sets are planted in March or April and get to their full growth about September.

The roots are dug usually in Jamaica in January or February. They are oughly dried and packed in parcels of to dry them more rapidly they are first scalded in a little copper pot in order to destroy life, of which the roots are very tenacious. White ginger and black ginger are from the same roots, the difference arising from methods of curing. Roots for sugar preserving are dug while quite young, before the

According to the custom that has prevailed in the Sixth Middlesex Sena-torial District since its present forma-tion the time will have arrived at the expiration of this year for the retire ment of our Senator, the Honorable Herbert E. Fletcher,—a gentleman worthy of advancement by the party to a higher office. The question as to who is to be his successor and from what locality he is to be chosen has begun to enlist the attention of the Re-publicans; and it should receive their pest consideration.

During the six years since the distric was formed our Senators have been chosen from its westerly and central parts. The easterly end of the district now seems justly entitled to repre sentation. nomination for one of our citizens, we presented in a previous circular the name of Chester W. Clark as our candidate. The very favorable responses received from prominent men in different parts of the district confirm the propriety of our action.

Mr. Clark's ability and integrity, proved during a residence of nearly thirty years in Wilmington, are beyond question. As an indication of the esteem in which he is held by his neighbors—those who know him best—we call attention to the vote he reeived when elected to the House in 1900. It was the largest vote ever cast in this town for a state or town official. As representative from the 27th Middlesex District he made a commendable record, serving efficiently commendable record, serving efficiently on the committee on the judiciary and on the committee selected to revise and consolidate the public statutes. His election would bring to the office qualities insuring satisfaction to his constituents and credit to the Commonwealth.

For the foregoing reasons we ask the district to give him a generous apport listrict to give him a generous support. (Signed)

Requefort and Its Cheese.

Cheese, which has been the fortune of Requefort, has destroyed its picturesqueness. It has brought speculators there who have raised great, ugly, square buildings of dazzling whiteness in harsh contrast with the character and somber tone of the old houses. Although the place is so small that it consists of only one street and a few alleys, the more ancient dwellings are remarkable for their height. It is surprising to see in a village lost among the sterile hills houses three stories high. The fact that there is only a ledge on which to build must be the explanation. What is most curious in the place is the cellars.

Before the cheese became an important article of commerce these were natural caverns, such as are everywhere to be found in this calegorous.

A STORY OF HENRY BERGH.

One of His New York Experiences in Protecting Dumb Animals.

Like a well dressed, somber ghost he went striding down the snowy street, and at University place he found the thing he had expected—a car packed inside almost to suffocation, both plating ling like big burs to bottom steps and scloud of steam, two ill fed, bony horses with bloodshot eyes and wide, red nostrilis flaring in their effort to fill laborling ling like big burs to bottom steps and straining backs and flanks, while their madly scrambling feet struck fire for the slippery stones as they strove in vain to start again the awful weight denly the straining effort ceased, the horses' heads drooped low, and through the thick air there loomed up before them a tail, dark form, with hand upraised commandingly. And calm and distinct two laconic words reached all sears: "Stop! Unload!"

"Who the blank are you?" furiously demanded the driver. "And where's your authority for interfering with this trip?"

"Who the blank are you?" furiously demanded the driver. "And where's your authority for interfering with this trip?"

"He knew well enough whom he was taiking to, so silently Mr. Bergh turned back the lapel of his coat to show his badge, for in those days he had to do constabulary work as well as official, then repeated, "Unload!"

But, being tired, hungry and mad, the floodgates gave way, and the passengers' wrath burst forth. Abuse, satirical comment, threats, filled the air.

began in Phil Casey's court. Hand-ball is the most democratic sport in the world. One day No. 1214 and I found ball is the most democratic sport in the world. One day No. 1214 and I found ourselves pitted as partners against a judge of the supreme court and a lightweight prizefighter, and although his honor played a pretty rough game we beat them by a close score; so close was it, in fact, that a spirit of rivalry was engendered which established our competition as a regular Saturday afternoon event thereafter. Later I met 1214 on his beat on the big bridge, and when I was kept late in my office that spring I would walk across for the sake of the talk with my big police friend. A master of hand, eye and temper I already knew him to be; now I came to know him as a poet in the rough, beset with longings and emotions which he did not himself understand. The sight of the full rigged ships, inbound with all sails set or outbound for the great unknown world, stirred the very soul of him.

"Will ye look at her now, walkin" like a great lady an' with the shape of one?" he would cry, with a kindling eye to the curve of the full bosomed sails. "An' where might she bound, I dunno? But it's well I'd like a great lady an' with the shape of one?" he would cry, with a kindling eye to the curve of the full bosomed sails. "An' where might she bound, I dunno? But it's well I'd like and a thing to keep out the way of. "Then he done a queer thing. Our tug was just puttin' back. He walked to the rail an' threw over a little white package to the tug. 'Mail that where it belongs, will ye?' he calls, an' I goes down after the crew.''

"And leave your place on the force?" I asked.

"An' I'll be doin' it one of these days. Why not? I have no wife nor fam'ly an' a tidy sum in the bank."

One Friday evening as I was walking across with the big policeman the talk suddenly shifted from the morrow's game. "A short left jolt, wasn't it?" cried "I guess it was. Anyhow, it was when I was up close an' it finished me. He hit awful quick an' awful hard an' every time he landed he hissed be-tween his teeth like a snake."

I didn't believe it would do any good, but I told Del I would help her in any way I could, so it was all arranged that they should bring their gift the next Sunday morning. On that day we breakfast at 9 o'clock, and pa does not have to go downtown to business. When Sunday came, the sun was shining bright and beautiful, the birds were singing in the yard, and there was a delicious freshness in the air. I was thankful, thinking that if anything could put pa in a good humor it would be this beautiful morning. A little before 9 Jim and Del drove up to the side gate, which was hidden from the house by trees, though that wasn't necessary, for pa was shut up in his shaving room, where he couldn't see anything, and Jim carried an oblong box about three feet in length up to box about three feet in length up to the side entrance. A retired officer of the Northwest mounted police who took part in a Missouri buffalo run forty years ago describes the impression at the time as of an earthquake. The galloping horses, the rocking mass of fleeing buffalo, the rumbling and quaking of the ground under the thunderous pounding, were all like a violent earthquake. The same gentleman tells how he once are a wonder buffals tume as I. The same gentleman tells how he once saw a wounded buffalo turn on an Indian hunter. The man's horse took fright. "What a pleasant day," I said, "for a family party to go for a drive in the country!"

"There's no family party except you and me," he said.

I knew that he was pining for Del, but I didn't say anything more for fear of making him ugly. I saw by the clock that it was five minutes to 9, and I went to the banister and coughed to give Jim and Del warning; then told pa that breakfast was ready. He got up with a sigh, and we went downstairs together.

THE CAMPAIGN.

The Republican State convention is to be held on October 3, next, and the state Committee have designated September 24 as dates on which to hold caucuses for the election of delegates to it and other conventions. This means the opening of the campaign.

For filling the State teket the Woburn Republicans are in full accord with the programme made up—Bates and Guild for Governor and Lieutenatt Governor, and the renomination of the present holders—and will give a good account of themselves on electron day. They are in a better condition to do this than for some time past, for there are no factional fights on hand, and the differences heretofore existing have disappeared.

But, notwithstanding the fact that harmony exists among the Republicans to a greater extent than for years, there is a plenty of work for them to do, and the present is the time to begin it. The Democracy are strong and active and will put up a great fight this fall.

Neither party have much the advantage of the campaign.

For fifteen years THE OUTLOOK has made its first of August issue a Special Illustrated Educational Number. The issue for this year is not only remarkable because of the number of eminent educationalists who contribute to it. and the importance of the topics dis-cussed, but also from its general at-tractiveness as an illustrated magazine. Among the contributors are President Among the contributors are President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, President Hyde of Bow-doin, President Harris of Amherst, Dean Jordan of Smith College, Pro-fessor George E. Vincent of the Uni-versity of Chicago, Professor J. R. Wheeler of Columbia, and Dr. Edward Everett Hale.

The August NATIONAL is primarily a fiction number. Eight young American writers contribute stories of genuine excellence. At least one of the number—Edward F. Younger of Chicago gives promise of soon being reckoned among the foremost short story writers of America. His Tragedy at Hazel-wood is a work of unusual power. even Pete could remember, and every week it was harder for him to row down to St. Michel for provisions. One night he came home half frozen and with a dreadful cough. Babette sent him to bed and said he should go no more. They must make what food no more. They must make what food they had last until warmer weather. But instead of sunshine and fair seas the clouds swept low and gray like gulls before a storm, and the waves gulls before a storm, and the waves came rolling in, with a deep, heavy swell that sent a dull, threatening roar as they broke, up to the lighthouse. And here and there in the dark green waters could be seen something else, a clumsy, swaying mass that gilnted blue white.

"The ice has come," Babette thought when she saw it from the lighthouse window one morning after she had trimmed the lamp, and there was a queer ache in her heart as she looked off down the strait and thought of how her birds would have to battle with it. but she did not tell Pete.

It was three days later when Mere Mrite showed her the empty meal bag. She smiled. There were still bacon and rice and dried fish. They were rich. At the end of the week there was no bacon and they had swel the last of the backward over her shoulders like red wings.

Her hands worked quickly over the lines of the boat, and, taking advantage of a momentary luli, she pushed away from the small, tumbled down pier and struck out bravely for St. Michel. She had often been out with Pete when the waves were as high as now, and she loved the excitement of it all. The low, flat shore of Presque Isle vanished entirely behind the wall of waters, but she could catch a glimpse of the dear old lighthouse and lits round top above the tallest wave, and the sight strengthened und aerved her for the five mile journey to St. Michel.

Suddenly, when scarcely half a mile out, the boat seemed to strike a new current. Babette caught her breath sharply as she felt the strong, resistless power sweep her from her course, and she bent over the oars with set, close lips and lense muscles, but it was useless. The deep, swelling rush of waters carried her northward, straight on to the middle channel of the strait. The wind had come up again and raged over the lake like a wild beast. Then, without warning, there rose before her the jagged, cruel line of the ice floe, and the next moment the waves had thrown the boa as if it had been a leaf full upon it. Instinctively Babette had risen at that last awful instant. As the bont crashed into the ice with a shock that made it leap and glined a footing on the ice floe, a slight, perilous one, to be sure, but one that meant safety for the moment at least.

Already the little boat had disap.

The winter twilight was falling swiftly, and the wind had gone down like one tired with its mad play. Far to the west she could see a boat struggling slowly up the strait, its lights gleaming now and then like jewels. She lit the lamp with fingers that trembled, and the broad path of light streamed out over the point. Babette's streamed out over the point. Babette's birds could fly in safety tonight, and below Landry Dubois held aloft a red scarf and told its story, even as it is told today around the islands of the strait—the story of Perces Points. strait—the story of Pete's Babette.

When Ladies Wore Masks.

When Ladies Wore Masks.

In the seventeenth century ladies were masks in public, and great was the variety of face screens that were seen. Ladies who had "coraline" lips for others who wished to hide the lower part of the face the mask was completed by a chin piece of linen, which afterward passed under the chin and over the ears. In 1632, says M. Engerand, a new mask called the mini, from the Italian mimics, was all the rage and threatened to usurp the lace of the black one. It was even the ladies who held to the latter and those who preferred the lattest novelty. Some years later it became the fashion to trim the upper part of the mask with a ruche of lace, to lengthen it with a beard of the same material and even to cover it more or less with lace to the borders of the eyeholes. Young ladies of this period, however, frequently contented themselves with covering the face simply with a plece of black crape for coquetry's sake and to appear the fairer.

Royal Bad Language.

The Pall Mall Gazette says it still remains a mystery how the chief English authorities in church and state ever succeeded in crowning King George I. Having come fresh from his native Hanover, the first monarch of the Brunswick dynasty was to his new subjects little better than a Melanesian from the south seas. Not a word of English could he muster, while the chief officials were almost equally ignorant of German. Latin, therefore, had to be resorted to as being the one possible medium of communication between them. A highly popular joke originated from these singular proceedings, which stated that an immense amount of bad language had passed between the king and his ministers on the great day.

The Giving of Tips.

Tips were always out of harmony with the independence and self respect of true Americans. Good pay for good work, with no unearned gratuities, in hotels, restaurants and everywhere else should be the custom. Tips are degrading both to givers and receivers, and the whole system of tipping is unsound and inexcusable. It cannot endure.

Ing both to givers and receivers, and the whole system of tipping is unsound and inexcusable. It cannot endure.

No club of any real distinction and importance permits the giving of tips within its jurisdiction, and the practice of distributing gifts for services which have been amply and even generously remunerated has no basis which is wise and wholesome. Never yet has there been an argument in apology for this abuse which was worth a moment's consideration.—New York Tribune.

An Idol With Diamond Eyes.

It is a curious fact and one scarcely known outside of Russia, and there act'dy ever mentioned, that the famous Orloff diamond was once the right eye of the great idol Serringham in the temple of Brahma. This precious gem was stolen at about the beginning of the eighteenth century by a French soldier who had made a precesse of being converted to the Hindoo religion in order to gain the confidence of the priests and admission to the temple. The Frenchman first sold the diamond for £2,000. On the next turn it was bought by a banker of Constantinople for £12,000. The banker kept it until 1774 and then sold it to the Russian empress for £90,000 and a life pension. The gem has been in the Russian royal family ever since. As it is now set in the imperial scepter of Russia it tressents a flattened rose out surface. An Idol With Diamond Eyes. and weighs exactly 1941/2 carats

The stranger showed gulit in every feature, but Lincoln, suffused with that pity for the luckless that was ever his, cheerily observed:

Municipal Bridegrooms.

An amusing story is told of the crowning of a rose queen of a country district near Paris. The selected queen, as one of the formalities of awarding their dower, was asked by the mayor for the name of her fiance. "I have none," she replied. Notified that a sweetheart was indispensable, the young lady added timidly, "I thought the municipality provided everything necessary." Straightway a young swain presented himself as an aspirant, and, being as promptly accepted, all things became regular and in order.

One of the sea captains in the employ of Stephen Grard had a rural Yankee's fondness for whittling with his jackknife and on one trip succeeded in getting away with a large part of the rail, although, feeling that he was not without the artistic sense, he really regarded the rail as greatly improved in appearance. The cat Nature.

The cat's spirit of independence is the most distinct characteristic of her nature. As Mme, de Custine rightly said, the cat's great difference from and, according to her sentiments, superiority to, the dog lie in her calm insistence on selection which invariably accompanies her apparent docility. To the dog proprietorship is mastership; he knows his home, and he recognizes without question the man who has paid for, feeds, and on occasion kicks him with all the easy familiarity of ownership. He follows that man undoubting and unnoticed, grateful for a word, even thankful for an oath.

But the cat is a creature of a very different stamp. She will not even stoop to conquer, nor be tempted out of her nature by offers of reward. She absolutely declines instruction; nay, even persuasion is jost upon her for

THE KING WHO WAS A PAUPER

By Frances Wilson Copyright, 1901, by Frances Wilson

The king was in his counting house but he was not counting out his money. He left such details as that to the henchmen who sat in the large outer office under the soft radiance of green shaded electric lights, adding up columns in a perfunctory manner and dreaming, to a man, of what they would do if they were king.

dreaming, to a man, of what they would do if they were king.

A modest door, upon the glass of which was inscribed in small, neat letters "Mr. Allston," led into the king's man and the state of the st private room, where Turkish rugs smothered the floor and leather covered chairs were ranged along the wall. contained such invaluable biographical dictionaries as Bradstreet's and Dun's, to say nothing of Poor's Railroad Manual, Somebody's Street Railways and a number of similar works, which contituted the king's solid reading, though ne had once observed dryly that "they contain more fiction than you'd suppose

The king was sitting at his desk. The king was sitting at his desk, tracing with a lead pencil crude squares and rectangles on the pad before him. The buzz of Wall street, softened to a gentle murmur by the height, came in through the open windows, and a soft breeze fluttered the ss, just to let him know that it was April.

that it was April.

The breeze was damp and cool, as if it had blown across moist, earthly places where the violets were pushing upward instead of across acres of metal roof. It rumpled the king's thick hair as nonchalantly as if he had been a mere commoner and somehow set him to thinking of the queen.

He stopped making squares and rectangles and began to scrawl something on the pad instead, something that would have made the clerks in the outer office open their eyes and stare in wonder could they have seen it, for it was quite sentimental and had nothing whatever to do with stocks and bonds:

onds:
Oh, faint, delicious springtime violet,
Thine odor, like a key,
Turns noiselessly in memory's wards
To let a thought of sorrow free!
Indeed the king himself was aghast when he looked at what he had written, and he tore the sheet from the pad with a hurried, guilty air and crumpled and crushed it into a small wad before he threw it into the wastebasket Then he took it out again and tore it into small pieces, a precaution which was entirely unnecessary, as no one had ever been able to read more than world would have believed him capable tangles again, his mind busy with the days before his millions had made him serene highness. In those days, he nembered, he and the queen used to remembered, he and the queen used to take long walks in the park when he could get away from the office in time. She called it their picture gallery and affected a fine scorn for the people who gushed over their Corots, Millets or gushed over their Corots, Millets or Rousseaus, but gave never at thought to the real thing—the tender greens, the misty grays, the last flush of sun in the western sky, against which the trees stood out in velvety, mysterious darkness. "We get our beauty at first hand," she was wont to say guyly, "instead of on small pieces of canvas which reck of man instead of God." And they had gone their way through the soft April twilights or sensuous summer dusks, in love with life and the world.

summer dusks, in love with life and the world.

But that was all very long ago! The king gave a weary little sigh as he realized how long. The queen—he liked to think of it all as hers—had "one of the finest private galleries in America" now, and she drove in the park on spring afternoons rather bored and disillusionized and certainly too busy in bowing to the occupants of other carriages to give much time to the beauty about her. It no longer gave her a thrill of delight to notice how the gray of the leafless trees sometimes melted into a pale amethyst nor did it touch her with a subtle sadness to watch the sunset through a network of bare branches. It is only the poor who have time to appreciate nature's free exhibitions.

Even kings have their bad quarter hours, though you couldn't make any of the clerks in the outer office believe it. In this particular case, for instance, not one of them divined that his majesty was sitting there in his luxurious private room longing for the cld days before he was king, living over the days when he and the queen were first married—those exciting days when he could scarcely get home fast enough in his eagerness to tell her perhaps that the time had come when she might afford the pale green carpet and that tint.

mahogany furniture uphoistered to match which she had so long coveted for her little drawing room. And the pink brocade hangings! The king smiled reminiscently as he thought of them, for they were a sur-prise. She never dreamed that they had reached that noist of affluence. prise. She never dreamed that they had reached that point of affluence where they could afford them, and he had decided to surprise her with them. He could still see the shine in her eyes and the flush on her cheeks when they came home! The portrait painters should have done her then, the king should have done her then, the king thought discontentedly.

Well, the queen had her carriage now and a retinue of servants and Parls gowns galore, but none of these things had ever brought the light ', her eyes that had shone there when the brocade hangings came home. Life had given her all her wishes and filched from her—zest. It seemed rather tragic to the poor king at this moment that the very success to which she had been his chief success to which she had been his chief inspiration had become the ocean upon which they were drifting apart; not intentionally—heaven forbid that—but like two ships when the cable that lashed them together had been sun-dered.

It was the price they paid for a lion's

It was the price they paid for a lion's share of the world's money. There was something chummy and intimate about a six room apartment with one maid which a house of the king really did not know how many rooms and a host of servants could not possibly attain.

Then it comes about naturally enough that queens should breakfast in bed and that kings have their clubs and that both should feel obliged to respond to the thousand and one demands upon their time until they neglect each other from sheer weariness. If there had been boys and girls about the great house, the king told himself with a sore sense of desolation about he heart things might have been dif with a sore sense of desolation about his heart, things might have been dif-

And he would tell her—he felt as shy as a boy at the thought—how the breeze had suddenly set him to thinking of her and the old days and he had found himself scrawling that favorite verse of hers, did she remember, "Oh, faint, delicious springtime violet" and—

The tinkle of the telephone bell at his side interrupted him.

"An engagement at 5? Can't you break it?" The king's volce was full of disappointment and appeal, and the queen, who stood serene and beautiful at the other end of the wire, wondered languidly what was the matter. "Very well. I may not be home for dinner. Sorry you couldn't go." And the king hung up the receiver with an odd sense of loneliness and failure.

He pulled down his desk cover with a bang, picked up his gloves and strode out, followed by a dozen pairs of envious eyes, and all the time he was asking himself bitterly what it profits a man if he gain the whole world and lose the sweetest thing in life—the soul to soul companionship when made the old life deer.

"After all," mused the assistant ste nographer as the click of the elevator door announced that he was really gone, "I sometimes imagine that the king isn't quite happy!" And then she rested her tired head upon her hand and tried to wonder what it would be like to have plenty of money.

Changed Her Name.

Mrs. Pigg, a very charming and vivacious widow, called recently on a legal friend of hers, a widower, to consult him on a matter of interest to her. "You know, sir," she said to him, "that when the late Mr. Pigg died he left me all his fortune, much to my satisfaction, of course, but he handicapped it with the name of Pigg, which I must say I don't like."

"Well," ventured the lawyer, "I presume a handsome woman isn't especially complimented by being left a Pigg."

"I should say not," she laughed. "Now, what I came to see you about was whether or not I must execute what you call a deed poll to get it changed." Changed Her Name.

changed."
"Um—er," he hesitated, as if wrestling with a great legal problem, "um-er-yes, but an easier way is to apply to a parson, and I'll pay all the ex-penses myself."

It was sudden, but a widow is never caught napping, and she appointed that evening for another consultation.

A Man and His Pension. Mr. Ware, the commissioner of pen-sions, received a letter from a man in Illinois a few days ago which read: "I am now getting a pension of $30 a month. Recently the Lord has pros-month. Recently the Lord has prospered me, and I do not think I should get so much money. I gave my services to the country, and I think I should have some pension, of course, but I think $30 a month is too much. Is there any way I can have my pension reduced or suspended while I enjoy the prosperity that is mine at present?" This is the only request for a reduction of pension ever received by the bureau. It was referred to the pension examiner in the district in which the man lived, who reported as follows: "I have the honor to inform you that the person who applied for a reduction in his pension is now in the insane asylum at this place and has been for Thousands of Pagoda Bells Ring at the Setting of the Sun.

Mandalay has its own sky, soft and gray and incurving like a tent, with white cloud lines that seem meant for scrolls if one could read. It is the Very Sacred City, the city of contemplation, the city of all the monks. A thousand pagoda bells give tongue to the wind there when the sun goes down; a crumbling thousand more give up to time the testimony of outworn things.

It lies in a curved arm of blue hills, and something broods over it with solicitude. This you suspect from the air of the place and the way the shrill talk of the parrots and the complaint off the goats and the laughter of the people come to you wherever you are sitting. Afterward you go out, as I did that morning with the commission of cr, and see under the very zenith, where the low gray sky is caught up, the square of the dark red crenellated wills of the old royal city, three miles each way, and outside the walls the parallel clear moat thinking back at the sky, and then you are sure that over and above the government of India some spirit that bends in affection over some spirit that bends in affection over and sore the contents. Seven roofed klosks stand at intervals over the gates in the wall—they are called pyathat, but they strike the eye like peaceful conclusions—and low white stone bridges raised in the middle span the moat. The buttresses of the gates are painted deep gray and white, and the bank that slants steeply from the wall to the water has here and there a low, twisted, spreading tree on it, purely for decoration. You may stop at a corner and look two ways along the reflecting water, with bridge after bridge receding across, and pyathat after pyathat diminishing above, and each red and gray and white vista so picked out and finished under the quiet light slipping adorably into the near blue of the hills.

1. And Nadab and Ablhu, the sons of Aaron,  offered strange fire before the Lord, which He commanded them not. The opening chapters of this book tell of the different offerings, all typifping our Lord's one great offering, and of the consecration of the priests, the Lord accepting the atonement offerings by fire supernatural (Lev. ix. 7, 22-24). Now, right at the beginning of the ministry of the priesthood we see this sad failure on the part of two of Aaron's sons. "Every man at his best state (apart from God) is altogether

2. And there went out fire from the Lord and devoured them, and they died before the Lord.

Thus at the very beginning of the priesthood Jehovah made it very plain that He would have a whole hearted service or none. So also at the beginning of the church story in the case of Ananias and Sapphira (Acts v, 5, 10) He showed unmistakably how He hates deceit and half heartedness.

3. Then Moses said unto Aaron, This is it that the Lord spake, saying, I will be sanctified in them that come nigh Me, and before all the people I will be glorified. And Aron held his peace.

That they were to be a holy people unto the Lord is the off repeated requirement from Ex. xix, 6, 22, onward. Jesus said concerning Himself and His disciples in His great intercessory prayer, "For their sakes I sanctify Myself that they also might be sanctified through the truth" (John xvii, 19).

Unless we ourselves are holy in our lives and separate from the world lying in the wicked one our ad vice to others will not have much weight, for we will then be like the Pharisees who say, but do not (Matt xxiii, 3); but if, like Levi, we walk with God in peace and equity we shall turn many away from iniquity (Mai), ii, 6).

gland ducts as a thin, yellowish liquid.
As it quickly loses a large amount of its watery elements by evaporation and becomes admixed with dust it forms a thin layer, waxlike in color and consistency, which normally covers only the outer portion of the canal, that in which the glands are located.

This layer of material probably has its chief function, in common with the few small hairs in the same location, its cher tunction, in common with the few small hairs in the same location, in protecting the vibratory membrane—the drum—from the contact of dust. It is interesting to observe that the exit of this layer of wax is accomplished by nature chiefly with the aid of the motion communicated to the ear canal by the movement of the jaw in chewing and talking, a motion readily felt by touching the orifice with the finger tip during these processes. The constant increase of the secretion is therefore provided with a corresponding loss, which takes place almost as imperceptibly as the constant loss of the superficial layer of the skin from the surface of the body.

This explanation serves to make clear why the use of ear spoons, plus or hairpins is unnecessary. The use of such objects is not only superfluous but it is often the cause of the

A slight amount of moisture causes the mass to swell so that the narrow chink previously existing between the mass and the canal is closed. If it is not now removed, the mass may shrink and the hearing power be temporarily restored, only to be lost again when conditions arise causing an increase in the size of the mass. Firm, gence syringing with warm water from a piston ear syringe is usually regarded as the safest and best method of removing the mass, the handling of which had better be intrusted to a physician or trained nurse, if possible.—Youth's Companion.

Not only the horses, but the powers of the law, says the London Chronicle, are swift at Ascot, for the course has a special tribunal for the pucket, welser or ticket snatcher arrested than he is standing in a little room in the royal stand, where the refully realizes that he is caught. Nowhere else does punishment so swiftly follow crime as at this court, which is deferred by clause 31 of the indictable offenses act of 1848.

This race course tribunal arose curlously in the eighteenth century from an assault upon a royal personage. In this indignation at the impossibility of instant punishment of the assailant he ordered that in future a magistrate should always attend the royal race meeting. This has ever since been meeting. This has ever since been done, and by the above mentioned act he chief magistrate of Bow street was constituted at office.

"It had been a hard day, Gold and bonds in three separate and vast consignments had come in late—too late for deposit. For the night nearly a million dollars must remain in the office safe. The unexpected influx had kept the junior partner later than usual, for he was a master of the detail of his office. For a time he dehated establishing an extra guard at the office, but gave over that Idea. Special precautions would arouse talk, and there were business reasons for keeping the matter quiet. Anyway, the burgiar alarm system and the special watch man were sufficient guarantee of safe ty. So the junior partner leaned back in his easy office chair and closed his eyes for a moment.

Bigger Than the Sun.

A minute parallax of about one-sixtleth of a second of arc found for Arcturus by Dr. Elkin gives a most astounding result. This small parallar it about 12,000,000 times the sun's distance. This vast distance would produce a diminution of light of about 35½ magnitudes, so that the sun placed at the distance of Arcturus would be reduced to a star of only 9½ magnitude! It would not be visible with an opera glass! Arcturus is therefore in round numbers 9½ magnitudes, or over 6,000 times brighter than the sun would be at the same density and brightness of surface as the sun, the diameter of Arcturus would therefore be about seventy-nine times the sun's diameter, or over 68,000,000 miles, and that a letter when once dropped the cases of the Cape and Australian volonies. But a short time ago the Boston & Northern seemed to ago the Boston & Northern seemed to have things all their own way, while at present the Lowell & Boston are decidedly on top, so far as the Woburn City Council are concerned. To be sure, it does not necessarily follow that, because the Council have turned a cold shoulder to the B. & N. the franchise asked for by the L. & B. will be granted. A marked hostility towards the B. & N. was apparent at the meeting, due possibly to the refusal of that Company to pay a fair proportion of the expense of widening Main streat, and an unmistakable friendly feeling towards the L. & B. What it all means it is hard to conjecture, but many persons think the L. & B. Company will yet get the Cummingsville and the Arlington Road franchises, and build the roads.

Mayor Feeney is credited with reducing the rate of taxation in this city from $17.50 in 1901, to $16.90 in 1902, and has earned it. It had been thought that the rate would be higher this year than last, therefore the report of the Board of Assessors was a gratifying surprise to the taxpayers. As manager of the City's affairs Mayor Feeney's strong hold is finance. One of the peculiarities about the military service in Germany is the paternal interest that the officers are required to take in the frugality of the men. The pay of the soldier is only G cents a day, but the army regulations guard it jealously. Each man is expected to keep his money in a little bag suspended from a string around his neck, and any officer during inspection may demand to have the bags opened and their contents shown. If it be found that a soldier is spending his pay too freely—think of that, with the pay at so low a mark—he is reprimanded and punished. He is compelled to make his pay cover his expenses.

Town Meeting? If we don't have one soon our orators will get rusty and we shall less the benefits of their wise and eloquent speeches I move that we have a Town Meeting right away. It is not necessary that there should be any business to transact; but the people are longing to hear some Town Meeting oratory.

The Star, with an eye single to the general good, is advocating an electric road in the Fells, and will fetch it yet Middlesex Fells, one of the most charming spots in all creation will never amount to anything as a public resort until means are provided for the people to get to it. It is a shame to allow it to "waste its sweetness on the desert air," or, as we read, to "blush unseen." The Park Commissioners ought to understand this, and by the time the buds burst next spring have a rolley line in full operation around and through that delightful park.

Richardson, by his ability, fine oratory, and genial manners, soon became a conspicuous figure in the House, if not its leader, and, although its youngest member, exerted a wide and potent influence on legislation. Boutwell, on the other hand, cut no swath which, in any light, would seem to justify belief in his future greatuess. Both young, both Democrats, both ambitious for political promotion and leadership, the now venerable extra Governor, then but little more than a lad, doubtless experienced heartburnings at Richardson's prominence and phenominal success. A TRYING ORDEAL.

The Pattering Process of a Marring shill Girl in Tanis.

The marringeable Girl In Tanis has a Tring ordeal to go through after her betrothal to the man not of her choice, but whose choice she is. She has to be fattened to the required size before the ceremony can take place.

As soon as the betrothal takes place she is taken to a room and there cooped up till the fattening process is concluded. Silver shackles are fastened round her wrists and ankles and the shackles of the first spouse placed on her, and she must fill them out.

It takes a long time to do this as a rule, and sometimes it cannot be accomplished in spite of all efforts. It is then open to the future husband to cryoff the bargain or waive the condition. In the case of a bachelor he takes care to see that the bracelets and anklets are not too large—that is, if he is fond of the girl—but if he is being forced into the marriage by his parents, he is a great stickler for custom. Stott girls are the more quickly snapped up in Tunis.—Pictorial Magazine.

Frenks of Language.

A peculiar kind of blundering known as "folk etymology" is responsible for some of the queerest freaks of language. An easy example will make this clear, says Harper's Magazine. Our American word "carryall" for a kind of vehicle is not a compound of "carry" and "all," but a slight distortion of the French "carriole," a diminutive car. The change was made in obedience to the universal tendency to assimilate the unknown to the known, to make words mean something by associating them with others which they resemble in sound. Often there is no etymological relation between the words associated, as when sparrow grass is made out of asparagus. This particular corruption was once in such good collaguagal use, that Walker, the grads is made out of asparagus. In particular corruption was once in such good colloquial use that Walker, the lexicographer, wrote, "Sparrovgrass is so general that asparagus has an air of stiffness and pedantry."

occurred to one of the academicians that, after all, the problem might be incapable of solution, and he determined to make a test for himself.

Filling a vase with water he put a stone into it and saw that the water flowed over. Then he took out the stone, filled the vase again with water and put into it a fish, the volume of which was the same as that of the stone, and saw, to his surprise, that the water again flowed over.

He told the academy of his discovery and the result was that the offer of a prize was at once withdrawn.

A Strong Man

HOLLAND'S GUEST

By H. E. ARMSTRONG & puright, 1901, by H. E. Armstrong

I had not seen a house for five miles, and the light of the short November day was failing. A searching north-east wind chilled me to the marrow. My horse had gone lame, and I was leading him. In these mountain solitudes a man is a fool to let himself be lost, but plainly I had taken the wrong fork. I had begun to despair when I came upon a clearing and in the midst

"Kind of lonely up here."

The effect on him, for his hearing seemed unimpaired, was to bring on a fit of twitching, and, what was worse and very horrible in a mute, the whole right side of his face moved violently up and down, as if the had lost control of his nerves. To hide his infirmity he turned his back on me and for awhile seemed to be going through a sort of spans. The seizure passed off awhile seemed to be going through a sort of spans. The seizure passed off awhile seemed to be going through a sort of spans. The seizure passed off a while seemed to be going through a sort of spans. I had expected no some side embers and then produced a load of bread and fell to cutting off libert slices. These he toast ed on a long fork. I had expected nothing better than fried sail pork, and, lo, a savory rabbit stew steamed before me! At first I at like a long through a suppression that make me turn in my seat several times. I began to shake as with cold, but I knew it was fright. The handle of the cup slipped from my trembling fingers, the hot coffee streamed over my legs, with difficulty I repressed a yell, and the cup smaller than the startified out of my wits. The effect on my host was extraordinary. He boiled out into the night so suddenly that his chair was thrown down. I determined not to remain longer as the great of a madman. Before if could get out he confronted me on the threshold, and in his hollow eyes there was a resolution that I should size, I succusibed when he waved me to a seat. Then he took down the shotgun from the rack, patter the breech lovingly, pressed the lever, fumbled in his coat pocket and ran two cartridges into the barrels. When he snapped them into place, I thought my last bour had come, so set, grim and evil seemed his expression.

"That's a fine gun you have there," I said, with my heart in my throat, feeling that my oaly chance of life lay in getting possession of the shotgun.

"I'd like to examine it," said I, standing up and holding out my hands. It was a critical moment, and I remember that I shook as with a congestive chill.

The fierce old man held out the gun, and I grasped it, but before I could reverse it, my intention being to cover him and tell him to throw up his hands, he wrenched the pleee from me, its eyes rolling wildly and his head in

Now, Ed Sparks, on the other hand, lacked not the courage, but rather had pressed his suit, even when Susannah had clearly snubbed him. I rhaps it was done only to nettle the hesitating Joel; perhaps Susannah was really impressed by Ed's brand new suit of store clothes, scarlet tie and glittering cuff buttons and studs. At any rate, when the dancing was done and the big dlning room was thrown open it was Ed Sparks who stepped quickly forward and "handed" Susannah to the delectable feast, and it was Ed Sparks who filled her glass with Aunt Marcy Johnson's best blackberry wine when the health of host and hostess was drunk. o man of rank, and on his way to Rhodes he fell in with an adventure which may be something more than legend. When he was crossing the Ægcan, his vessel is said to have been taken by pirates. They carried him to Pharmacusa, an island off the Carlian coast, which was then in their possession, and there he was detained for six weeks with three of his attendants, while the rest of his servants were while the rest of his servants were sent to the nearest Roman station to raise his ransom.

The pirates treated him with politeness. He joined in their sports, played games with them, looked into their habits and amused himself with them

Man's Wonderful Stomach.

The human stomach possesses most wonderful powers of adaptation to circumstances. When Lieutenant Bligh and his eighteen men were cast off from the Bounty by the mutineers in an open boat, they subsisted for fortyone days on a daily allowance of one-twenty-fifth of a pound of biscuit per man and a quarter of a pint of water. Dr. Tanner in 1880 fasted for forty days, subsisting, it is said, on water alone, and Sucel and other fasting men have since excelled this.

have since excelled this.

Kaffirs, North American Indians and the fat boy in "Pickwick" may well be quoted as fearful examples of voracity, but even their gastronomic feats are exceeded by the full grown Eskimo, who will daily eat twenty pounds of flesh and oil if he has the chance, while on the authority of Admiral Saritcheff a Yakut of Siberia has been known to consume in twenty-four hours "the hind quarter of a large ox, twenty pounds of fat and a quantity of melted butter for his drink!"

A HARD HEADED FARMER. The Way He Held Up a Prince With a Pitchfork.

When Edward VII. of England was an undergraduate at Oxford university, he had an adventure which led a newspaper of that time to describe the prince as a prisoner. It said that "not very far from Oxford, at a place called Steeple Barton, there was a farmer named Hedges, a man of much independence of character, commonly known as 'Lord Chief Justice Hedges.'

"On one occasion the prince and his friends were out with the South Oxfordshire hounds, but, meeting with indifferent sport, they resolved on rid-

Donkeys In Mexico. There are two classes of donkeys in Mexico—one with four feet and the other with two. Each is a kind of competitor of the other. Sometimes they are partners. They are both bearers of burdens and the subjects of brutality. Everywhere you see the donkey loaded down with sacks of ore, Several stories are told of Tennyson's thoughtless speeches. "What fish is this?" he once asked his hostess where he was dining. "Whiting," she repiled. "The meanest fish there is," he remarked, quite unconscious that he could have wounded any one's feelings. Yet his kindness of heart was such that when his partridge was afterward given him almost raw he ate steadily through it for fear his hostess might be vexed.

On one occasion Tennyson was very rude to Mrs. Brotherton, a neighbor at Freshwater. The next day he came to her house with a great cabbage under each arm.

"I heard you like these, so I brought them," he said genially. It was his idea of a peace offering.

Makico—one with four feet and the other with two. Each is a kind of the with two. Each is a kind of the with two. Each is a kind of brutality. Everywhere you see the donkey loaded down with sacks of ore, baskets of dirt, cans of milk, sacks of water, and you find his driver very often loaded in the same way. These ombinations sometimes go two by two, and sometimes there will be a band of ten to fifty thus loaded, corn or whatever away be needed in the villages or cities. It is indeed a medieval life in middle and southern Mexico.

Siamese Tobacco.

The best tobacco in Siam is grown at Petchabun. It is planted in open fields near the town after the floods in September or October, and the first crop, or tips, which is considered the best quality, is gathered about February and the last about the beginning of May. The very best quality cannot be purchased, as it is reserved for the special use of the king and sent down to Bangkok, where it is smoked in the palace and distributed to the chief officers of state.

McCALL IN PERIL.

McCALL IN PERIL.

Within the last week or two the existence of a strongly organized opposition to the renomination of Congressman Samuel W. McCall by the Republicans of this District has been discovered. It originated with, and has for managers, some of the strongest men in the Party. It threatens the overthrow of Mr. McCall.

From recent reports in some of the Boston papers it is learned that a private meeting of influential Republicans from several quarters of the District was held in Woburn a few days ago, at which it was resolved to leave no stone unturned to defeat Mr. McCall in the convention on Oct. 1. The argument to be employed is, that he is not a Republican, and, therefore, not a proper person to represent a Republican constituency in Congress. Their objection to Mr. McCall is well taken, for while professing to train with the Republicans are verse with the Democrats.

The young man assented and issued the policy. He waited a considerable time for the payment of the premium. His friendship for the young woman caused him to resist sending the bill, but he finally did so. The recipient complained bitterly to an acquaintance, who is considerable of a wag, and he readily encouraged her in her ideas. "Now, really," she said, wrinkling her pretty brows, "this bit of paper costs next to nothing. I could have written it myself."

Musical Snatis.

A French naturalist claims that there are few if any animals which have a higher appreciation of music than snails. Place some snails on a pane of glass, he says, and you will find that as they move over it they will make musical sounds similar to those which a person can produce by wetting his finger and then rubbing it around a glass tumbler. Complete airs, he points out, have been played on tumblers in this way, and he expresses the opinion that quite as good results can be obtained by using snails instead of fingers.

SPOTTED COACH DOGS.

The Act by Which One Controversy Was Devided.

Three men were disputing in Berlin one day as to which of them had the best memory, and finally they asked Oskar Blumenthal, a well known with the united States from 1890 to 1882 inclusive? The breed appears to have become extinct in this country, having, like the Newfoundland, which has shared the same fate, second one. "Put me in a corner of this room, and I will play three games of chees simultaneously without ever looking at the boards."

"That's nothing to what I can do," said the first speaker again. "Begin a conversation with me now about the most absurd things possible, and at the end of an hour I will repeat the entire conversation with me now about the Austrian province of Dilmantia, and are still popular to a certain the most absurd things possible, and at the end of an hour I will repeat the entire conversation with me now about the most absurd things possible, and at the end of an hour I will repeat the entire conversation with me now about the Markey of the body with small black spots the size of a dime.

The third man was silent, and Blumenthal.

The third man was silent, and Blumenthal said to him: "Why don't you tell us what you can do? A few mile than the word of your wonderful memory."

"I know it," was the reply, "but I did not the know that my two friend can and attract attention by his down that a can of or pour wonderful memory."

Directions in London.

In London and throughout the tight little Island the words "up" and "down" have a peculiar significance. In going to London from any part of England you go "up." In traveling in any direction from the capital you go "down." So in London itself everything goes "up" if it goes in the direction of the bank—that is, the Bank of England—and going from that center toward any of the points of the compass is to go "down."

The word bank, which is not only always spelled with a capital "B." but is always uttered with an impressiveness that suggests an initial letter of the largest type, may be said to be in a sense interchangeable with city, a term of equal dignity and value in the eyes of Englishmen, and likewise invariably adorned with a capital "C."

The City does not mean London by any means. It means a certain limited section of London, the part where business is mainly carried on and where the great financial institutions stand.

Singing School For Thrushes.

A writter in Forest and Stream tells us of the methods the thrush adopts in teaching his little ones to sing.

"Find," he says, "a family of wood thrushes and carefully note what takes place. The old male thrush will sing the sweet song in loud, clear, flutelike notes once and then stop to listen the song. Some will utter one coarse mote, others a sharp note. After awhile they seem to "cyget their lesson and drop out one by one. When all are silent, the old thrush turns up again, and the young birds do not acquire the fifters, and they oung birds do not acquire the fifters, and they oung birds do not acquire the fifters, and so it goes on for house. The young birds do not acquire the fifters, and so it goes on for house are repeated the following spring. [Copyright, 1902, by American Press Asso 1-3. And the Lord spake unto Mosea saying, Send thou men that they may search the land of Cannan, which I give unto the children of Israel.

When they came to the borders of the land which God had promised to them (for it was only eleven days journey from Horeb to Kadesh-barnen, Mosea solid. "Baholid the Lord"

Fear not, neither be discouraged." But the people came to Moses and asked that men be sent to search out the land and bring back word as to the way to go and what cities to enter (Deut. i, 2, 21-23). The idea of spies therefore originated with Israel, and the Lord gave commandment to have it so, breause they wanted it so, Just as afterward the Lord commanded Samuel to give them a king because they insisted on having a king like other nations (I Sam. vili, 4-9, 19-22). Read Ex. Ili, 7, 8; vi, 6-8, and consider it well and say in the face of such assurances if the people's request for spies was not simply a lack of faith in God.

They even wished they were dead or might die in the wilderness, and many of them got their wish. Their thought was to get rid of their trouble. They had no thought or desire that God might be glorified in their death. Contrast John xxi, 19; Phil. 1, 20. See records of other murmurings in Ex xv 24; xvi, 2; xvii, 3; Num. xvi, 11. 41. They did not consider that their weep ing was in the cars of the Lord and their murmurings against Him (Num xi, 18; xiv, 26, 27; Ex, xvi, S), nor that when they complained it displeased the Lord (Num. xi, 1).

The Lord Himself was their captain, as He also is ours (Josh, v, 14; 11) Chron. Xii, 2; Heb, ii, 10), but they wanted no more of Him. Stephen says that in their hearts they turned back again into Egypt, and Nehemiah says that in their rebellion they appointed a captain to return to their bondage (Acts vii, 39; Neh. ix, 17). BETTY'S

PRINCESS

By TEMPLE BAILEY

The Martha Washington was an hour behind time. On the pier at Old Bay was piled a waiting cargo-coops of restless chickens, watermelons whose dark green rinds proclaimed their inner lusciousness, barrels of veg-etables and a disconsolate calf in a crate, which gave forth occasional separation from its kind.

Betty sympathized with the calf.

She, too, was lonely. The only other visible occupant of the pier was Pink Johnson. Pink was crabbing, and Bet-ty wondered if it would be beneath the dignity of her position as a traveler f she went over and watched him unil the boat came. On ordinary occagaged in compounding mint juleps r four "gentlemen" who had dropped n to discuss the merits of the new orse which was to be entered for the loughts of lonely little Betty weighed But Betty was not unhappy. This

She was tall and fair, and there was something about her gown which was different from anything Betty had ever s.ch. It was straight and plain and durk, but there was a dash of bright color in her slik blouse, and Betty thought it beautiful.

The gentleman with her Betty called the prince. He was very handsome, but he looked tired, at least his eyes did. The princess looked tired, too, or perhaps bored would be a better word, but Betty had not yet added to her vocabulary some words which the dreary experiences of maturer life make necessary.

"Oh, thank you!" said Betty. "But would you mind waiting just a minute until I finish with Wavaletta?"

Presently she turned to the princess and told her all about it and that she was sure the knight would conquer the Crab of the Deep.

"And then what will happen?" asked the princess.

If she went over and watched him until the bott came. On ordinary occasions she and Pink visited freely, but pink had recognized an extraordinary event and with true negro instinct had kept his distance.

Before Betty decided, however, there appeared just above the horizon a faint streak of smoke, then a dark body, which, growing larger, proved to be the Martha Washington. She came along slowly, throwing up a crest of white water in front of her and learning shell and a broad road of dancing, foam tipped waves.

As she steamed up to the wharf many hands were ready to receive the lines thrown to hold her fast, for negroes of various ages and sizes rolled out from behind boxes and barrels, while from the ox carts on the shore a descended lazy drivers, who lounged down to get the small stores which the beat would bring.

Pink Johnson was on his feet, winding up his crab line. He threw the chicken head which had served for bit back into the water.

"If you wish."

"Yes," said Betty, "and the princess—lan't that it, Betty?"
"Yes," said Betty, "and the princess-loved the prince."

The man laughed—a little bitterly, "That was only in a fairy tale," he said.

The princess protested. "No, no, ilisten, Otto. The princess did not know her heart at first, but afterward, afterward"—
"Oh, you are telling it all wrong!" cried a mystified little voice. But no one listened.

Two years ago Hon. Samuel W. McCall, in his home caucus, in reply to some sharp criticism on his course in Congress, made a plain and frank statement of his position (and in so doing of course spoke to the entire district) and closed by saying that while he was willing and desirous of representing them at Washington, he wished it to be distinctly understood that he reserved the right to vote and speak as his conscience and best judgment dictated on questions affecting the policy of the government. His record so far has certainly made it plain that he thinks he knows better than anybody else what is the true financial and toreign policy for the government to pursue, and the treatment he has received at the hands of managers of political affairs in the District and at polls would seem to warrant his conceit. We believe, however, that a change in sentiment is taking place; that if his nomination for another term is accorded by the Republican convention, voters will show their independence to an extent little dreamed of either by Mr. McCall or those who are backing him for another term.—Arlington Advocate

Board With the Butler.

To avoid the trouble of housekeeping, many wealthy Parisians board with their butler, so to speak. Instead of ordering the food for the household from day to day, they pay a fixed sumper month to their butler or housekeeper, who contracts to supply them with the usual three meals per day, composed of the customary courses, says. What to Eat. The price paid for this service varies in accordance with the style of living. If guests be invited to dinner or any sort of entertainment be given, an extra sum per head is paid. In this way the lady of the house avoids the annoyance of butchers' and bakers' bills, and if the butler does not keep his part of the contract it is easy enough to find another to replace him. Of course, the president's household is carried out on this plan on a large scale, and many of the big stores supply all their employees with daily meals in the same manner. The banks and other administrations of similar nature often furnish the noonday meal to their cierks by contract, the latter paying a trilling sum toward the cost.

The early pins in this country, as in England, were made with globular heads of fine twisted wire, made separately, and secured to the shank by compression from a falling block and die. The most honored month of the year in Belgium is the month of May, known as the Virgin's month and consecrated to the Virgin Mary. The Manner in Which the Rope is Mandeled by an Expert.

"A mistaken impression prevails in the mind of the public in regard to the manner is which a lasso is handled," says an expert. "The idea that the loop is always awung around the head before making a cast, especially when the roper is on foot, is croneous. No man of experience ever makes a cast in this fashion from the ground in practical work. There are several reasons why he does not. One of them is that the movement is likely to frighten that he may have to wait some minutes before a favorable opportunity occurs for making a cast. He knows that better results are obtained by holding the rope as unobtrusively as possible, even keeping it conceasile from the object of capture.

"On the contrary, however, when mounted and in pursuit it is absolutely necessary to awing the loop over and made with the greatest possible force in order to overcome not only the forward movement of the pursued, but also the action of the wind should that chance to be against you.

Thus Moses did, and it came to pass as the Lord had said. He who told Moses to do this saw in it a symbol of Himself on the cross for the sins of the world, and He so spoke of it to Nicodemus in our Golden Text for this lesson (John ill, 14, 15). That old serpent, the devil, by sin has bitten our race, and multitudes are perishing, but as the likeness of that which had bit as the likeness of that which had bit to lead to the large twas put upon a pole for their deliverance so the Lord Jesus was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that was on the cross made sin for us that the habit, but to be able to require it. So in Christ on the cross we see sin rendered harm less to injure those who are in Christ. "The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law; but thanks be to 60d, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ" (I Cor. xv, 50, 57). As quickly as the eyes of a bitten Israelite fell upon the serpent on the pole he lived, and the moment a sinner looks to Jesus on the cross, suffering in his stead, there is life for him in Christ, as it is written, "Look unto me and be ye saved" (Isa, xiv, 22). The serpent on the pole was no thought of serpent on the pole was no thought of Moses, but the Lord's own provision.

"Has anybody seen old Gabe?"
The query was repeated. As men looked at each other there in the fast failing night a silence fell upon the crowd. The silence was ominous. Gabe's poor cabin would never survive the flood. Perhaps while they stood there it was crumbling down into the hungry water. Then the spirit which prompts all mankind to extend a helping hand found voice. There were shouts, suggestions, conflicting advice. Sinddenly one man ran toward Gabe's adbin. Those nearest him exclaimed; others inquired who it was. Soon the crowd knew Dan Graham was foremost in a mad race to the river's edge.

The tragedian, somewhat in his cups, was traveling near Louisville when he took a horse from a field and rode off with it. Horse stealing at that time was a capital offense in Kentucky, and the greatest horse their was a mannamed Fontaine. Booth was soon overtaken and when asked where he got the animal said:

"I captured him in a field back here."

"Indeed!" said one of the farmers.
"And what might your name be?"

"My name is Fontaine," said Booth, without a smile.

"Fontaines" ejaculated both men simultaneously. "Then you are the very man we want. Come back to town with us."
"Certainly," said Booth in the most good natured manner, and, wheeling his horse, he rode back to Louisville with his captors.

The city jail was then in charge of a Colonel Thomas, who knew Booth well. "We have brought you Fontaine, the horse thief, and claim the reward," said the farmers proudly, addressing the jailer.

"Where is he?" they were asked. Booth was produced. "Why, what does this mean, Mr. Booth?" asked Thomas.

"I haven't the slightest idea," said the great tragedian, with the utmost simplicity. "I met these two men with this horse, and they insisted upon giving it to me. I guess they stole it. I think one of them is Fontaine."
The rustics were about to be locked up when by the most singular coincidence a man rushed to the prison door on horseback and shouted out the information that the real Fontaine had been taken into custody. Booth had been taken into custody. Booth made Fontaine's acquaintance in jail, and the horse thief, who was executed later, left by will his skull to the actor.

How a Bull Elk Won a Battle by a Solar Plexus Blow.

The cougar does not leap upon its big game nor drop upon it out of treetops, but sneaks close or les in wait upon the level and goes from cover in a straight rush like the tiger or the hunting leopard. It endeavors to seize upon the lower throat or shoulder with its teeth and to twist the quarry's head against this "purchase" in its poweragainst this "purchase" in its power ful forearms until the neck is broker put it modernly—go in and finish in any old style. worst of an encounter. Felix Michaud, a most reliable free trapper of the old regime, once told me he had watched a lion stalking a bull he had watched a lion stalking a bull elk. It was a Teton mountain cougar of the big variety. It went from cover in a headlong rush, but missed its neck stroke as the bull lunged ahead, catching him at the point of the shoulder and going under his belly. Both animals were bowled over in a mixup of hair, hoofs, claws and horns. In a brief struggle, as they rolled over together, the cougar was thrown into the air, as if hoisted by a spring trap, by a convulsive kick from the bull's hind leg. The maddened elk gained its legs and chased its enemy off the field. An unlooked for punch in the wind had taken the sand out of pussy.—Outing.

Years ago a Scotch great-grandpa brought to America a piece of sand rock that some persons thought was intended for a grindstone. What caused them to think so was not because it was round, but on the upper side it was hollowed out like a saucer, and the other side had a small projection like a chocolate drop in shape and size. Soon this was discovered to be what is termed a "drip stone" and when set in a shady place and the saucer side filled with water will desaucer side filled with water will de-liver crystal pure and cold drops from the underside. The water is absolutely clean and pure as the result of this homely process. The idea was original ly taken from the orientals, no doubt. —Now York Press

Both will wander in search of fortune to the ends of the world and yet look back to their native mountains as their only real home. The same is true of the Swiss, although in a lesser degree. It is a very singular fact that inhabitants of mountainous countries possess this feeling of attachment in a much intenser form than those of flat countries.

In those days Mrs. Wentworth had lived on no side street, but in the stately white pillared mansion which crowned the highest hill in Mayville and which was pointed to with pride as the home of Judge Titus. Fate plays strange tricks! After the death of the judge, when the lawyers were quite through, somehow there was little or nothing left for the daughter, although one of the lawyers took his entire family abroad within the year and the other built himself a new house.

The trouble began at the Culture club. Mrs. Wentworth had felt sure she had detected a most peculiar smile upon Mrs. Drewelowe's face at the precise moment when she stood up to read her paper on "Egyptian Architeture." Then, laier in the afternoon, Mrs. Roberts, also of Euclid avenue, had leaned over and said laughingly: "Mrs. Wentworth, Mrs. Drewelowe says she doesn't believe you ever wrote that paper. It was so good she thinks your husband must have written it."

Any clubwoman knows this is a most grievous insuit.

responsive chord in certain parts of the District.

Editorially, the Arlington Advocate and the Woburn Journal bave lost not time in seizing the opportunity to criticise the independence of the Winchester Congressman.

There is no doubt that the Republican State Machin: would welcome any organized movement in the District which had for its purpose the overthrow of Congressman McCall.

At hear-quarters they would hardly dare to originate or sanction openly anything of the sort, and while there has been considerable criticism of Mr. McCall by the Stalwarts both in and out of his District, no one has yet been discovered with the courage to make contest again him.

* By the word "Machine" in one of the above paragraphs the Globe means—what? We have never seen one, and have no knowledge of their construction. It may be that the political Party so ably and zealously championed by the Globe, the Democratic, is run by machinery, but we do not think the Republican Party is so run.

This is awful cutting. So original too!

If the Editor of the Winchester Press is wise he will not pose as a writer of irony, nor essay its production even in the easier form of sarm. He is not built that way. Possibly the young man is smart, but he shines brighter as a reporter of small Winchester gossip than in futile attempts at humorous or satirical writing.

"There are two ways," said a bird dealer, "of teaching a parrot to talk. One way is to put him in a darkened room, to sit in a corner and to repeat over and over again the word you want him to acquire. GREEN TRADING STAMPS

Ask at the stamp booths in our store for a stamp book and (10) FREE stamps

It's an old but true saying "there's no sentiment in business." People patronize a store because they are satisfied, not because they love its proprietor. When a mercantile concern forges ahead, year after year, ever on the increase, you have unvarnished evidence of its having pleased that inscrutable giant, the Public.

Our own experience bears out these facts. The Public, in truth, dictates our policy. That we have pleased, we modestly call attention to the exceptional growth of this concern. Again we meet an issue. The Public asks for GREEN Trading Stamps. We have them. That means you may have them with every cash purchase you make.

The Boston Trading Stamp Company (The Sperry & Hutchinson Co., Prop'rs) has placed an annex store within our establishment so it will not be necessary for you to visit their main store, 160 Tremont Street, to exchange your stamps, FREE, for your choice of an endless variety of goods for household utility and adornment.

CUTTING HIMSELF OFF.

The Blunt Way In Which Chaplain Cannon Refused a Fortune.

The Rev. Edward Cannon, a chap-lain to King George IV., was a dog-gedly independent man. On one occa-sion he refused to compliment his roysion he refused to compilment his royal master on his singing and for a time fell into disfavor. His manner was high handed and not always too courteous, but his actions were always on the side of right and justice. The biography of his friend Barham, the author of the "Ingoldsby Legends," contains, among other anecdotes of Cannon, the story of how he disinherited himself.

Greeted him with:
"Well, old man, have you heard the news?"
"No," said Smith. "What news?"
"Jones is dead. He died last night of midnight," renied the other. bag which he may be carrying while walking on a stone pavement during cold, dry weather.

But, dismissing newspaper science, it is somewhat astonishing. In view of the many ways in which in cold, dry countries electricity is unintentionally developed and manifested by sparking, that the first knowledge concerning this phenomenon did not come to the ancients in this way rather than by the attraction of light substances by amber. The explanation of this.

bleeding is still firmly belief of by several savage tribes, and especially by the Papuan negroes.

When one of their physicians becomes convinced that it is necessary to bleed a patient, he goes several feet in front of him and then, drawing his bow, he fits a sharp pointed arrow to it and after a careful aim fres the arrow into the vein which he desires to open. The arrow, it is said, invariantly goes straight to the mark, and the thorn or splinter of glass with which it is tipped does the work as successfully as a lancet.

Moreover, the patients never show the slightest fear, since they are convinced that from the moment the arrows pierce their veins they will begin to recover.

That classic stream, the passing of whose water by the city of St. Louis moved the state of Illinois for not keeping its nuisance at home, affords a lucrative employment to a number of men. In the south branch above the drainage canal they are kept busy the day long scooping the top layer of the stream off with buckets and putting it in barrels, in which form it is sold to packers at the stockyards to be transformed into soap. This takes place in "Bubbly creek," which is the name applied to that part of the river into which the waste from the stockyards empties through sewers.—New York Tribune.

This may be and probably is an exaggeration, but the fact remains that the Persian dynasty came to an end when the battle was over and that Zoroastrianism, which had been the re-ligion of Persia for over a thousand years, was at once supplanted by Is lam. Its modern representatives, as is well known, are now the Parsees of tests.

Be Slow to Belleve II.

There is no better test of purity and true goodness than reluctance to think evil of one's neighbor and absolute incapacity to believe an evil report about good men except upon the most trustworthy testimony. Alas, that this large and lovely charity is so rare! But it is only with those who possess this charity that men accused of sins against society have an equal chance with those accused, under the forms of law, of crime. Every man brought to trial for crime is presumed to be innocent until he is proved to be guilty, but with the world at large every man sinadered is presumed to be guilty until the world at large every man sinadered is presumed to be guilty until the world at large every man sinadered is presumed to be innocent. slandered is presumed to be guilty un-til he proves himself to be innocent, and even then it takes the liberty of doubting the testimony. 5. When thou art come into the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not learn to do after the abomina-tions of those nations.

Before the deluge God saw that the wickedness of man was great in th earth and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually (Gen. vi, 5). The mar-gin says that every imagination signi-fies also the purposes and desires. Af-ter the deluge sin developed again in the descendants of Noah and became very manifest in the rebellion against God of the Babel builders. In due time God called Abram from among the idolators of Mesopotamia to dwell in a land which He promised to him and to his seed forever, that in the descendants of Abram He might have a people who would honor Him and live the female not only on account of his to make Him known to other nations. larger stature, but also because he is They were therefore to be a people the more katabolic of the two. The separated from all the customs and man tends to expend energy and the showing that he needed a proportionate start the nations which formerly occupied this land were given to those abominations mentioned in the previous verses, and because of these they were being driven out. Therefore Is rael was to beware of and avoid all these things. It was because of the wickedness of those nations that the Lord did drive them out before Israel and not because of any righteousness on the part of Israel (Deut. ix, 4-6). He did all that He did for Israel for His own name's sake (Ezek, xxxvi, 22), then in return for all His loving kind nesses He only asked them to let Him property and the woman, whose smaller respiratory need is further shown by the facility with which she can without discomfort diminish here breathing power by means of the corset. For who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto Me? saith the Lord." Here is a wonderful and beautiful prophecy of the prophet like unto Moses; one of themselves drawing near to God on their behalf and bringing God's message to them in mercy. In all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that He might be a meriful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God to make reconciliation for the sins of the people. He was faithful to Him that appointed him, as also Moses was faithful to Him that appointed him, as also Moses was faithful in all his house (Heb. ii, 17; iii, 2).

30-32: How shall we know the word which the Lord hath not spoken; will be false prophets and teachers, the thing lies in the name of the Lord (Jer, xxiii, 21, 25, 32). Therefore John tells us by the Spirit: "Beloved, believed not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God, because many false prophets are gone out into the world. Hereby know ye the spirit of God. Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God (I John iv, 1-3). The test therefore is, "What think ye of Christ?"

A PRISON GHOST

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

(Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.)

Most of the men who saw the prison ghost are still living, and there are two or three other reasons why I should not give the exact location.

When I was warden's secretary at a "model prison," supposed to be made perfect by a new warden put in to abolish cruelty, I had no doubt that he was doing as he pretended. There was a convict, No. $224, down on the books as James K. Jones, serving a term for burglary. One day, notwithstanding the aboliton of such punishments, he was flogged.

The warden had been appointed on the recommendation of a hundred influential men, several of whom were clergymen, for the express purpose of reforming the prison, yet here was asse of flogging.

Jones' record consisted of naught but black marks. He was reported as lazy, defant, impudent and dangerous, and for a portion of the time he had been in chains and on bread and water. There were no reports against him under the new warden, and yet he had received a cruel flogging.

I could not make it out and dared not ask my chief for an explanation. It was none of my affair, but I determined to have a talk with Jones himself, and after three or four days the opportunity came. I found him to be a physical wreck. He told me that when he entered the prison he was a man of thirty, in the best of health and had a magnificent physique. At thirty-six his hair was gray, his back bent, and he looked like a man of sixty. He had been paddled or flogged over thirty times. He had been struck, kicked and cuffed times without number. He had lain in the dark cells for months at a time, and for months his diet had been only bread and water.

Jones was ready enough to give the cate.

The burglar turned.

months at a time, and for months his diet had been only bread and water.

Jones was ready enough to give the reason. He denied the burglary and declared that he had been wrongfully convicted, He was a man of hot temper, and when he arrived at the prison he was rebellious. He was flogged on the second day, and from that time on all the officials were down on him. He declared that he was deliberately magged and provoked into defiance and that the idea seemed to be to hound him to his death. When the new warden came, Jones hoped for fair treatment, but was disappointed. The new head was down on him from the first day and sought for pretexts to administer punishment. If the convict's extensively were to be believed, then

Two of the miners held big hands, and the pot grew to $2.000 before the show down. Again I was in an agony of fear lest the duplicate ace should be in their hand. Ike had passed out, and as I glanced around the board I saw him take up his cards to examine them. Catching his eye, I gave him a look, and he, after noting a card in his hand, threw them, backs up, on the table. He had the ace of clubs.

This ended the game. The miners had had little money at the start, and the loss of what they had won, with a few hundred more, cleaned them out. Statesman and Gambler.
Charles James Fox, the English statesman, was even more notorious in the gaming world than he was famous is the world of politics. He had squandered $250,000 before coming of age. He became one of the most profligate gamesters of the victous days in which he lived. Some of his finest displays in debate were sandwiched between excitement such as would unnerve most citement such as would unnerve most men who had no serious business on hand. Walpole has given a glimpse of a typical passage in this extraordinary man's life. He had to take part in the discussion on the thirty-nine articles in parliament on a certain Thursday. He had sat up playing hazard from Tues-day evening until 5 o'clock on Wednes-day afternoon. An hour before he had recovered $60,000 that he had lost and recovered $60,000 that he had lost and by dinner time, which was 5 o'clock, ended losing $55,000. On Thursday he spoke in the debate, went to dinner at past 11 at night; thence to a club, where he drank till 7 the next morn-ing; thence to a gambling house, where he won $30,000, and between 3 and 4 in the afternoon he set out on a jour-ney to Newmarket.

an age for her to realize what she had done.

There were a number of meetings "over the garden wall," and two hearts became intertwined. But it was impossible that the affair should go further. The girl dared not inform her father of her action and its consequences, and the young man, knowing that she must be an heiress, though he would be wealthy himself, would not think of marriage except by the most honorable and open approaches. Both, being opposed to a clandestine marriage, finally gained sufficient strength to agree to a separation. Henry Thorpe went abroad.

His uncle, Prosper Martindale, placed his yacht Esper-ance at the disposal of the savant. A party was made up, including Mr. Mar-tindale's daughter Lily and her flance, Allen Ward. Allen Ward.

One afternoon while the pleasure seekers were lounging on the quarter deck in wicker chairs Mr. Martindale asked the professor for some informa-tion regarding that interesting swim-mer, the cuttlefish.

"There are various kinds of cuttle-fish," said Rusk, "differing in weight from a few pounds to several tons. The octopus, or eight legged fish, is not found in the largest size. It is the squid, with his ten arms, or tentacles, that grows to the greatest magnitude. Two of his arms differ greatly in length from his other eight, being sometimes over forty feet in length, while the shorter are only eleven.

HOW MARJORY

Marjory Kane was a schoolgirl who lived in a university town. On her way to the high school she was obliged to cross the campus, where she occasionally passed students, but none of them challenged her reverence.

sionally passed students, but none of them challenged her reverence.

The day that Marjory was graduated she was returning to her home, dreesed daintily in white mull, passing, as usual, across the campus, when she met a dignified, intellectual looking man about thirty years old. He barely glanced at her, but Marjory as soon as his eyes were turned away fixed her gaze on him, and it was evident that she was very much struck with his appearance. The same evening at a school reception she saw him talking with one of the teachers and learned that he was the new professor of English literature.

When September came, Marjory was entered to pursue a select course of English literature in the woman's college connected with the university. Her continuance of any study whatever after her difficulty in getting through the high school was a surprise to her friends. Marjory gave no reason for her action, having the faculty of reticence, which is often far more valuable than learning. She lumbered along through the first year at the tall

SIGHTS OF OLD PANAMA. An Old Method Utilized by a German

Officer In China.

Thirty dollars was stolen at the Officers' club in Tientsin, China, and the members of the club resolved, if possible, to catch the thief.

A German captain volunteered to manage the affair, and the first thing he did was to summon all the native servants of the club. He thes said to them:

"Some money has been stolen here. Following the English style, dinner is a full dress and ceremonious affair. "Some money has been stolen here, and I am looking for the thief. I shall find him in an hour, not before, since I need that much time in order to get instructions from a celebrated magi-

> "must go up to that table and press on > it first your right and then your left > hand, and when that is done you must and step into the next room."
>
> The servants did so, and as the last one stepped into the adjoining room the officer followed him, and after looking for a few moments at the many uplifted hands he pointed to one man and said, "You are the thief." The Chinaman to whom he pointed nearly fell to the ground with fright and admitted his rull and promised to make mitted his guilt and promised to make restitution.

Very simple was the method adopted by the officer for discovering the culprit. While the native servants supposed that his spirit was in Germany in communion with the celebrated magician he was carefully smearing the surface of the table in the dark room with fat and oil, which he then blackened by means of soot. The innocent servants raturally pressed their hands on the table, according to his instructions, but the culprit, though superstitions, did not do so.

As a result, while the uplifted hands of all the others were coal black, his were of a natural color, and thus his guilt was clearly proved.—Detroit Free Press.

It is Not so very Dangerous if the Victim Will Keep Cool.

If swimmers could be trained to keep cool under all circumstances, there would be comparatively little drowning among bathers and summer pleasure seekers. Cramp is usually assigned as the cause when some good swimmer drowns. But cramp ought in reality to be nothing serious. Usually is affects only an arm or a leg or maybe only a hand or foot. Any moderately good swimmer can keep afloat with one arm or even without the use of that, yet good swimmers drown often as a result.

"If ear," he said, "there is a lack of application."

Marjory put the corner of her hand kerchief to one eye.

Carpets

Our experience has been that the refurnishing of houses chiefly takes place in the Fall doubtless in preparation for the various social functions which come with the colder season.

Hence we are now displaying specially attractive Oriental Carpets and Rugs (the result of our buyer's recent trip abroad), Wilton and Brussels Carpets (both foreign and domestic), Linoleums, and a wide variety of other floor coverings in all grades.

Our Upholstery Department exhibits its customary choice assortment of Draperies and Furniture Stuffs.

A WOMAN'S DEVOTION

One summer while on a bicycle tour I stopped at evening on the banks of a lake beautifully situated and looked about for a place to spend the night. A farmer came along driving a yoke of steers, and he told me there was but one house in the neighborhood that would be agreeable to me, Captain Laurence's, but the captain was a gentleman and did not take in strangers. Mounting my wheel, I rode around the lake till I came to the house in question.

"If I had known that you had ever beard of me," said Captain Laurence, "I would not have invited you to stay over night. As it is, I may make it less over night. As it is, I may make it less embarrassing for you (for I have ceased to feel embarrassed about my disgrace) by telling you how it occurred. If you believe my story, you will rest more pleasantly tonight under my roof; if not, I will have done all in "My early years in the army were spent in a seacoast fortification isolated, especially in winter, from the rest of the world. To pass the time we played poker, for awhile for money, but as the excitement of gambling was distasteful to me I finally declined to play for stakes, whereupon we played for chips. This not proving interesting, we began to cheat one another, studying different methods, some of us becoming quite expert. We would play a game of freeze out;—that is, any man caught cheating was ruled out, the others playing on till all had been caught but one, who was the winner. We game of freeze out—that is, any man caught cheating was ruled out, the others playing on till all had been caught but one, who was the winner. We played this game incessantly one winter and found it more exciting than a game for real stakes played legitimate. Yet he end of the season I was declared the best cheat of the party, having won more games than any of the others.

"In the spring I was ordered to one of the principal posts in the west, in which were located the headquarters of the department. There I met the daughter of the general commanding, to whom I became engaged. Poker is common in the army and was universally played at Fort —, but my distance for the game was so great that I declined to play. I was thinking of the girl I had recently won and the happiness in store for me. I was soon to be ordered to the command of an arsenal, where I would have an opportunity to use my scientific knowledge and perfect a new gun I had invented. All these matters were passing through my mind, and the game I was playing was absolutely forgotten. Suddenly I heard one of the company say:

"Captain Laurence, you are a swindler."

"All rese few the few that is a possible to the game."

"Captain Laurence, you are a swindler."

"All rose from the table, some looking at me with astonishment, others glancing at me. One who had been looking over my hands declared that he had not only seen me cheat once, but several times.

"I awoke to the consciousness that during my absentmindedness I had dropped into the habit formed during the previous winter. What would it avail me to assert my innocence? I was ruined.

"Gentlemen"— I began and stopped. Why make a defense that would not be believed? I covered my face with my hands, turned and left the room.

"The next morning I was cut by very officer at the post. The general sent for me and told me that to avoid a scandal which would be injurious to my corps and the army it would be necessary for me to resign, and if I did not he would be obliged to prefer charges against me of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman. 'Of course,' he concluded, 'all is over between you and my daughter.'

CLRING A BALKY HORSE.

Simple Methods May Be Employed Without Caing the Whip.

An expert states that the vice of balking in horses is almost invariably caused by improper breaking and handling of the animal while young, says the Chicago Chronicle.

It is only high strung and ill tempered horses that balk, and these are handled with more success by humoring and patience than by severe measures, which generally Lanke matters worked with the people. A very good treatment is to watch the animal closely in places where it would be likely to balk, and with the first sing of stopping the driver should as y "Whon," then get off and loosen or pretend to change the harness in some way; also take up a foot and tap in the shoe with a stone. Spend a few moments leisurely in this way, and in interaction to balk and will forget its inclination to balk and will go on at the first bidding. It is also well to give a lump of sugar or a handful of onts or an apple. This will always produce better results than severe measures.

It is a common thing to find large slabs of pilchard bait used for pollack blown right up the line by large fish. This happens only when the pollack is itself hooked. Mercedes Marcel, a young woman of the Spanish type. Miss Marcel had ravishing black eyes, a wealth of hair of the same hue and a supple figure. She had great influence over the patients she nursed, often lifting them over their low points solely by her magnetic influence. For this reason I recommended her whenever she was disengaged.

Mercedes Marcel, a young woman of the Pick of the Catskill mountains. The village of Palenville is situated at the foot of the Catskill mountains. Looking upward to the west one sees, some 2,000 feet above, the Mountain House, while to the east is an undulating country, through which flows the Hudson, with the Berkshire hills far beyond. The town, being at the mouth of the Knaterskill cove, is frequently in the property in the power.

"Very nice. You needn't press the button. I wish to be left alone with my patient. Go out and don't return until I call for you."

She obeyed me. I turned my back to her as she went out and saw her face in a mirror. She gave the sick woman one of the most peculiar glances I ever saw, such a glance as a hypnotist would give one he was endeavoring to master.

"Now," I said to my patient when the door was closed, "why did you not tell me this before?"

"Because she always remained in the room when you were here, and I have no charge to make against her."

"What, then, is the trouble?"

"There is something in her that is wearing the life out of me. Don't ask me what it is, for I don't understand it myself."

She had great influence over the patients she nursed, often lifting them over their low points solely by her magnetic influence. For this reason I recommended her whenever she was disengaged.

I sent for her to attend a Mrs. Brierly, and as usual she gave great satisfaction. The patient, however, did not seem to gain after having reached a certain point. Indeed she seemed to retrograde. Several times it occurred to me to ask, as is my custom with my patients, how she liked her nurse, but as Miss Marcel was always in the room with her when I called and as I had heard the nurse's praises so often sounded by others it did not occur to me to send her out in order to make the inquiry.

One day while visiting Mrs. Brierly I noticed that she was following the nurse about the room with her eyes, and when Miss Marcel's back west turned she quickly draw me down and with her lips close to my ear whispered;

"If yon don't take that woman away, I shall die."

"Miss Marcel," I said, "go and get me some hot water."

We stepped into the elevator and sat down with our faces to the plane. The conductor telephoned the engineer on the mountain, and we moved slowly out of the station. The day was superb, the air clear as a crystal. The ascent at first is gradual, but as we rose above the tops of the trees the sweep of country before us to our right and left began to unfold like a stereopticon view upon a screen.

"Fine" exclaimed my companion, his eyes lighting with enthusiasm. "How high do we go?"

"Two thousand feet above the river," I replied.

"Two thousand? I wish it were ten thousand, twenty thousand. I would like to see this view from the sky."

"You will see it from an elevation best suited for you to enjoy it."

There was a monotonous rolling of the iron wheels as we rose steadily, the yiew passing through the same changes as from a balloon. Now the river, some dozen miles distant, came into view far to the north, disappearing far to the south. There were patches of farm and wood land, low hills divided

I did what I could to make the poor woman feel easy and left her. Her husband was coming in as I was going out. I told him that I was about to change his wife's nurse.

"You surprise me. I have never met a more agreeable woman," he sald.

"You mean seductive?" a faint suspicion coming over me at his warmth.

He turned pale.

"Brierly," I said, "I shall at one commence inquiries as to Miss Marrel's antecedents, If you are especially predisposed toward her, suspend judgment till I make my report."

Within an hour I had hired a detective to learn all that he could about Miss Marcel, It was six weeks before he made his report. When I received it, Mrs. Brierly had become convalescent and was no longer under my care, so I went to her husband's office.

BIZET AND HALEVY. The Story of the Origin of a Popu-Bizet, the composer of the world famous opera "Carmen," and Halevy, his librettist, once occupied apartments whose outer doors opened on the same landing. As soon as he had finished an air Bizet would hasten to submit it to most severe criticism. From morning to night the piano resounded in the composer's apartments. One night Bizet finished a dramatic bit in which he flattered himself he had successfully sketched the pride of a triumphant toreador after a successful bullfight. But Halevy listened in silence and showed but a moderate enthusiasm. Bizet, somewhat piqued, asked the cause of this coldness.

"It's good, I admit," said Halevy. "In fact, it's too good. It lacks movement—it lacks snap—in short, it's not popular enough."

"Not popular enough!" shouted the piqued composer. "Do you want to write for the siums?" He went out in a huff, but soon relented and in an hour returned with another aft, "Listen to this," said he; "here is my toreador idea written down to your popular level." It was indeed the song of the toreador, and the only one which on the first night received an encore and seemed to move the first night audience from its torpor.—Chicago News.

This wonderful plant clings amid thickly grown moss against the side of the famous old Church of St. Michael. It is stained that it has bloomed perennially since the days of King Alfred, and this statement has never been disputed, for its record has been as carefully kept as the pedigree of the bluest blooded family in the kingdom. The general expectation was, that the Board of Public Works would elect a Water Registrar at their meeting last Monday evening, but it was not done. Mr. Arthur B. Wyman, whom Commissioner Preston nomineted a week before for the office, sent in a letter of declination, which put an day long. They were well filled, too. end to further proceedings in that direction. Then the advisability was suggested by Commissioner Preston of consolidating the offices of Water Registrar and Clerk of the Board, and Registrar and Clerk of the Boats, and choosing Mr. McAvoy, present clerk, to fill the combination office. Mayor Feeney and Commissioner Preston were constituted a special committee to way Inn, Pine Point, Maine. Thanks canvas the proposition and report on it to the Board. Mr. A. P. Barrett's name was not mentioned, although public sentiment strongly favors his appointment to the office of Registrar. It has been learned quite recently that the State Board of Civil Service Comthe State Board of Civil Service Commissioners are watching, with considerable interest the proceedings in this matter, and have expressed the opinion that the Woburn Board of Public Works will do well to consult them before making an appointment.

It is proper that the people of Woburn should understand this in order to enable them to act intelligently in the future. A majority of the Council are in favor of granting the franchise asked for by the Lowell & Boston Street Railroad Company, but President Brady refuses to count the votes of certain members, and thus thwarts the will of the majority, and deprives this city of a greatly needed additional electric line.

Under unfinished business, the ordinance increasing special police force was adopted and passed to be ordained l2 to 2.

Ald McHugh offered an order granting Cummingsville location to Lowell & Boston R R. under detailed conditions, the Company to build from Winnistreet over Bedford street to Willow, and through Willow towards schoolhouse about 5,000 feet by Dec. 31, 1902, and balance to Burlington line by Sept. 1903, and to give a bond of $2500 with sureties.

On this order the fight began in earnest, and so hot did it become that policemen were called on to put down the row. Therefore when a man wished to show that he was friendly he extended his right hand, which would be clasped by the other's right hand if he, too meant peace. Thus each could be sure that the other would not draw his sword.

With the dawn of more peaceful times the custom lost its one time purpose, but it still retains its original meaning—to show friendship.

The Defensive Reason Why the Hight Was First Used.
Did you ever stop to think about the custom of shaking hands and wonder why it is that we always shake the right hand? Probably you have never thought about it at all or if you have you think that the only reason for using your right hand is that you were taught not to use your left one, says the Buffalo Courier. In reality this custom, now so common, is a very ancient one, and it originated in this way: In the days when people were not so peaceable as they now are and when sach man settled his quarrels in his yown way every man carried a sword so as to do the greatest amount of business in the least possible time. A FIGHTING ... WHALE

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.] I was one of the crew of the whaling ship Crosby when I came across a gl-gantle whale that had often been seen before, that had destroyed many lives. He had come to be known as Tom Bow line and was recognized by a V shaped scar on his head. The Crosby was to the west of St. Helena when he was raised by the lookout. Tom Bowline came to lowered, and the whale was recognized by his scar. The mate's boat had the lead and got within striking distance first. As soon as the har-poon entered the whale settled away like a rock and went down 350 feet. Then he turned and rushed for the surface like a wild locomotive, breaching his full length out of water and filling and swamping the mate's boat with the waves kicked up by his fall. He rested a moment and then slewed around and started for the boat. He caught it with a swing of his faw and made splinters of it and killed three men at the same time. For five minutes the mate, who was supporting himself by an oar, was alongside the fish and rubbling against his body, but he finally pushed himself clear and reached one of the other boats. The monster had the three boats at his mercy, but for some reason was satising his full length out of water and monster had the three boats at his mercy, but for some reason was satis-fied with the destruction of the first. Ferhaps it was because the others re-mained perfectly quiet while he seemed to be searching for them. Fif-teen minutes after destroying the boat he moved slowly away, and those who had escaped his fury returned to the ship. We were at this time over half full of all.

One hundred and fourteen days latone numbered that four-cell days and of Tristan d'Acunha, in the south Atlantic, we cut in our last whale, cleared the decks of the tryworks and set our course for Salem. We were full to the hatches and thus far had made one of the best seasons on record. In about three days we had the ship cleaned up three days we had the ship cleaned up and most of the smoke and grease washed off our bodies, and we were about to begin painting when at noon on the fourth or fifth day after turning on our heel for home a whale suddenly breached right astern of us and not more than 300 feet away. His fall raised three or four waves, which pitched the ship about as if we were lying to in a gale, and, though the monster settled away out of sight at once, we had identified him as Tom Bowline. It may seem queer to you to read that every man aboard, from captain to apprentice, was badly captain to apprentice, was badly frightened as soon as it was known most four months before at a point 2,000 miles away, and yet he had overhauled us as if he had been a steamer cruising ground. His breaching so near us was taken as evidence of his evil intentions, and some argued that near us was taken as evidence of his head meant to strike the ship.

All work was at once suspended, and the men were ordered to move around the decks on tiptoe. We hoped the leviathan had not seen us and that his breaching so close aboard was quite accidental, and after half an hour had passed away without further sight of him everybody began to feel easier. A man had just started aloft with a glass to scan the sea when the whale rose to the surface about a stone's throw to windward.

From that time on for five hours he swam with the ship, paying no attention to us, but maintaining his distance to a foot. Then of a sudden he settled down, and we all heaved a sigh of relief. We had not seen the last of him, however. An hour before midnight the odor of a whale suddenly saluted the nostrils of the men, and they looked to the windward to catch sight of a great black bulk on the water. It was Tom Bowline. Word was passed around and all hands turned up, and from 1 to 3 we were in a state of suspense. At about 3 o'clock the whale began lashing the water with his fukes. When he had churred an intention of the water with his fukes. When he had churred an intention of the water with his fukes. When he had churred an intention of the water with his fukes. When he had churred an intention of the water with the substantial of the water with his fukes. When he had churred an intention of the water with the of suspense. At about 3 o'clock the a dozen.

When he had churned an can't wait so long!—Lippincott's. slewed around and headed straight for us, but miscalculated our speed and passed astern, though clearing the rudder by not more than five feet. As he rushed to leeward, swinging his head and thrashing the water, we luffed sharp up until we were heading due east. Whether he located us by due east. Whether he located us by sight or sound no man can say, but as he slewed around I saw that he would come head on for our stern. As he started on his mad rush the ship's head was brought due north again in hopes to avoid him, but he changed his course as well and came down on our port quarter.

Her decks were awash as the last one got away, and that was about fourteen minutes after she was struck. When we came to look around for Tom Bowline, he had disappeared from sight, and no whaler ever report-

It had always been generally believed that he received injuries in striking us that caused his death. He hooked up to the first notch and the aconsed up to the first notes and threw the throttle wide open. The en-gine made a jump, and before we could say "Jack Robinson" we were tearing down the grade at sixty miles an hour. We hadn't far to go, but the question was whether the locomotive would stick to the rails. She swayed and pitched and shuddered and shook like a ship in a gale. We shot over a bridge and out where we could look behind,

Tim reversed his engine as he spoke and whistled down brakes. We came to a stop within a quarter of a mile of the bottom. The train coming in front dashed past the station and began to rise, soon losing its speed, and when within a hundred feet of us we stopped it with a log we had put across the track. Then we boarded and took possession of it.

We found the switch locked and spent half an hour opening and getting past it. Just as we got on a speed up the grade faster than a horse could go a company of Confederate cavalry dashed into the station.

Why Savages Turn in Their 1905.

Why Savages Turn In Their Toes In the first place, the foot naturally takes that position when it has never been confined by boots or the ankle distorted by high heels. Convenience is also on the side of the natural posi tion of the foot in the case of the age, for he has to do much walking through long grass and undergrowth in forests. Consequently his progress would be much impeded if he turned would be much impeded if he turned his toes out to catch these obstacles instead of brushing them aside and outward, as he now does. Lastly, the savage uses his foot much more as a help to his hands than we do, and it is obvious that in doing this he must turn his toes in.

A girl emptied her purse the other day. "I have to clean it out," she explained, "every once in awhile, just as I do my bureau drawers." These are some of the things that were in it: Two one dollar bills, a fifty cent piece, two quarters, a five cent piece (lead) and ten pennies, a "lucky" Italian coin, a Japanese "pocket piece," two receipts, Japanese "pocket piece," two receipts, three bills, a parlor car check, four street railway transfers, five mutilated stamps, a pencil stub, matine coupon, three keys, newspaper clippings and a cleaner's check for gloves. the advent of the ocean steamer. In

He wanted to get an iron rail that would "hold" and would take the place of the thin strips fastened to the chair of the rondbed. Just before he reached England his whittling revealed to him the solution of his problem, and that solution took the form of a T rail with a broad base that could be applied direct to a solid wood support. That T rail is still in use on all railways of the world.

The elder Cunard, who was apprenticed as a lad to a Scotch shipbuilder, is said to have amused himself in whittling the hulls of vessels. Occasionally he would fit one of these with masts, sails and rigging complete. Tired of familiar types, he would ex-

Old Age and Appetite.

An English scientist deprecates increased eating as a means of keeping up the strength of those who are advancing in years and particularly objects to the repeated and general use of concentrated forms of animal nourishment for the aged. Overnourishment in old age is apt to lead to pains and aches due to the impairment of excretion, and a long protracted course of overfeeding will end in an attack of gout. Even artificial teeth are not to be considered an unmixed blessing, for by a provision of nature the teeth begin to decay and become useless just when the system begins to thrive without much animal food of coarse fiber. Indigestion, says the scientist, is mostly not a disease, but an admonition. "It is the language of the stomach and is mostly an unknown tongue to those who are addressed." It means that the individual has not yet found his appropriate diet. "There is no food whatever which is wholesome in Itself. his appropriate diet. "There is no food whatever which is wholesome in itself. That food is wholesome which is so to the individual."

"Some one's bound to smash us up. There's no engine on either train. They've caught us in this scooped out country and give us the choice of bein' crushed from behind or in front."

"But we may reach the switch in time to avoid both."

"Who were's done this job has been smart enough to lock the switch so that no crowbar will open it. We're done for."

Just then above the rattle there was a sound behind us as if a hill had topled over, and, looking backward, we could see tons of mud and stones pouring over the rails. In about a minute there was a crash, and the coming freight cars were pilled in a heap at the landslide. A Difference.

A Difference.

An American girl, pretty and bright, had been spending some time in Leanington, England.

The afternoon before her departure she suddenly remembered that several books from the public library should be returned. She took the volumes, sallied forth and presently encountered a young Englishman whose acquaintance, though brief, had not been without attraction.

"Really, now, how queer you American girls are!" he said. "Now, I suppose if you were at home, walking on Fifth avenue, you would never be seen with a fellow lugging all these books."

"Certainly not," she quickly and archly answered.

"Certainly not," she quickly and archly answered. "If I were in America, the gentleman would be carrying An Autograph Request.

Embassadors receive many queer requests in the course of their official duties. Here is one that was sent to Mr. White by a western woman, who inclosed pieces of linen, when he was minister to Germany many years ago: "We are going to give a fair in our church, and I am making an autograph quilt. I want you to get me the autographs of the emperor and empress, the crown prince and Bismarek, and tell them to be very careful not to write too near the edge of the squares, as a seam has to be allowed for putting them together."

A Clever Pickpocket.

In Paris two police officers recently got upon the track of a pickpocket. They surprised him in the act at the omnibus bureau and followed him in hot pursuit. He was a thin, poorly clad young fellow. In the Rue Roche-chonaut, however, he suddenly disappeared. Judging that he had slipped into one of the houses they set themselves to watch for his reappearance. The thief in the meantime had entered a bathing establishment, and after a refreshing bath entered the box of another bather and calmly clothed himself in the smart suit he found there, then passed proudly and pencefully out before the very eyes of his pursuers. The elimax of humor came when the other bather, arrayed in the rags of the pickpocket, was grabbed by the officers of the law at the door and dragged off to the station house. With some difficulty the situation was explained; but the pickpocket is still laughing.

Make the Most of Your Gifts.

Personality has done wonders with both heredity and environment. It has made moderate gifts accomplish marvelous things. Men with moderate gifts, by patient and persistent application have put to shame the splendidly equipped, who have indolently frittered away their patrimeny. Out of the most untoward surroundings men have found their way to the grandest achievements. The boy from the log cabin has outstripped the boy from the palace. The barefooted boy has outstripped the boy or pampered indulgence. The plodder has outstripped the genius. The tortoise has passed the genius. The tortoise has passed the hare. Whether a man be richly en-dowed or moderately endowed, his suc-

LESSON I.—The giving of manna (Ex. xvi, 1-15). Golden Text, Matt. vi, 11, "Give us this day our daily bread." If we would as the people of God please Him, we must remember that in Him we live and move and have our being. that He giveth life and breath and all things and that in His hand are our breath and all our ways (Acts xvii, 25, 28; Dan. v. 23). Therefore without a murmur we should gratefully accept day by day all He sends or permits to come and daily feed on Him in His word (John vl. 57). Lesson II.—The Ten Commandments

LESSON IV.—Worshiping the golden calf (Ex. xxxii, 1-35). Golden Text, Ex.
xx. 3, "Thou shalt have no other gods before Me." One of the most amazing things recorded in Scripture is the love and the long suffering of God, and another is the great sinfulness of man.

Mixed Eggs.

Professor Edwin Ray Lankester "as sitting in his office in the Natural History museum, London, when he was visited by an elderly woman, evident ly from the country, who carried a parcel which she handled with the most exaggerated care. She was in a state of great excitement and exclaimed:

"I've got two of 'em."

"Two of what?" inquired the professor.

"Two 'awks' eggs," replied the woman. "Tim told they're worth a thous sand pounds aplece."

The professor, much interested, looked at the eggs, "These are not auks' eggs," he said.

"They nre 'awks' eggs," said his visitor. "My son Joe found 'em."

A light dawned on the naturalist. "The kind of eggs which are so valuable," he remarked gently, "are the eggs of an extinct bird called the auk—a-u-k."

LESSON VII.—Journeying toward Cannan (Num. x. 11-13, 20-36). Golden Text, Ps. xxxi, 3, "For Thy name's sake lead me and guide me." God never left them, although they off provoked Him to do so, but the pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night was their faithful guide and oracle and shield. Moses seemed inclined to lean a little upon his father-in-law, but in that he was wrong.

LESSON XII.—The death of Moses (Deut. xxxiv., 1-12). Golden Text. Ex. xxxiii, 11. "The Lord spake unto Moses face to face." The greatest of earthly prophets died; all kings and priests died; it is appointed unto men once to die, but our great High Priest. Prophet and King tasted death for every man, died, rose from the dead, is now at the right hand of God in heaven, crowned with glory and honor, and will come again to restore all things of which Moses and all the prophets have spoken (Heb. i, 1-3; ii, 9; Acts iii, 19-21). High cheek bones always indicate great force of character in some direction. Fullness of the temples is sup posed to show powers of mathematica d to send the spies God permitted them (Dent. 1, 20-23), and we see the result.

Lesson IX.—The brazen serpent (Num. xxi, 1-9). Golden Text, John iii, 14, 15, "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness," etc. There are many foreshadowings of God's way of redemption, such as the shedding of blood and the coats of skins of Gen. xxii, but none more suggestive than this of the serpent upon the pole to which our Lead refers.

Lesson X.—The prophet like Moses (Deut. xxiii, e22). Golden Text, John vi, 14, "This is of a truth that prophet that should come into the world." Every prophet, priest and king, as well as every sacrifice and the whole tabernacle and its ritual, all foreshadowed the true Prophet, Priest and King, the true tabernacle, the true and only Lamb of God, of whom the Father said, Hear Him!

Lesson XI.—Loving and obeying God (Deut. xxx, 11-20). Golden Text, John v, 3, "For this is the love of God that we keep His commandments."

The New Testament comment upon this lesson in Rom, x points us to Christ, who is the end of the law for
